Until Allies, Too, Unify Forces

No Navy Generals Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday that the navy will be able to keep its rank titles until allied countries also unify their armed forces.

He also told the Commons defence committee that even after the common uniform is issued in four or five years, servicemen may continue to wear their traditional walking-out uniforms on appropriate occasions.

He did not define "appropriate occasions."

Mr. Hellyer made clear in a 54-page brief read to the committee that a new rank structure for the unified services will be introduced. The structure will be largely the army's.

* * *

He added, "It is my intention to authorize members of the Canadian armed forces to use rank titles traditional to their former service. That is the general policy."

Later, in reply to Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East), the minister said the regulations will permit sailors to continue to use their present rank titles, such as petty officer. Promotion would not require them to change to army nomenclature.

If unification were successful and "some years from now when other countries follow suit," a consensus would arise for the full adoption of the titles of the unified force.

The five-man defence staff was present — in navy, army and air force uniforms — for the committee session.

Mr. Hellyer told Gordon Churchill, former Conservative defence minister, that their attendance was possible because his department is running so smoothly.

Mr. Hellyer said unification will not require any change in the organization of combat units "and, therefore, combat

Admiral Long Disloyal

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday night that Rear-Admiral William Landymore was fired for "18 months of consistent disloyalty to the policies of the people he was paid to serve."

The minister conceded under persistent questioning by Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) that he did not once talk to the admiral during those 18 months.

Mr. Hellyer said that from November, 1964, Admiral Landymore, then chief of Maritime Command, fully understood the government's policy on unification and was unalterably opposed to it.

QUALIFIED NO

He said the admiral returned to Halifax from the Ottawa conference in that month and did "everything he possibly could" to prepare for a confrontation on the issue.

Mr. Forrestall asked whether the minister thought Admiral Landymore should have been court-martialled.

"In the context of the single service concept, no," Mr. Hellyer replied.

Mr. Forrestall later asked why the admiral was not court-martialled if he had been disloyal for 18 months.

DIDN'T ELABORATE

Mr. Hellyer said that if the issue had been anything less serious than the issue of the single service he would have insisted on a courtmartial. He did not elaborate.

Admiral Landymore still is in the navy and will be until April.

Mr. Forrestall said Mr. Hellyer had made a serious allega-

Holdout Denied On Hydro

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp told the Commons Thursday the federal government is not holding back any financial aid for hydro projects in British Columbia.

He was replying to H. W. Herridge (NDP, Kootenay West) who quoted Premier Bennett as saying Ottawa was withholding "no-strings-attached financial aid" from hydro projects in efforts to obtain part ownership of B.C. water and power resources.

Mr. Sharp said the Bennett statement "is both absurd and without foundation."

Riverview Psychologists

HOUSE HEARS FIRINGS ROW

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

A crisis over the mass firing of psychologists at Riverview Mental Hospital took preference over departmental estimates in the legislature Thursday.

Patrick McGeer (L, Vancouver Point Grey) asked for an adjournment of regular business so the House could consider a matter of "urgent public importance" — the firing of the five-member staff of psychologists at Riverview, who had submitted 30-day resignation notices because of what they called intolerable working conditions.

A tense atmosphere settled over the House in the ensuing discussions, until Health Minister Black finally announced he would try to meet the psychologists to discuss the problem.

QUICK MEETING

Mr. Black, prompted by Premier Bennett, said, "I will contact my deputy in an effort to have these people in my office as quickly as it can be arranged. At the moment, that is the only commitment I can make."

(He later said the meeting has been tentatively set for "early next week, Monday, if it can be done.")

'WITHIN CHANNELS'

Attorney-General Bonner had tried to block a discussion on the floor of the House, saying it was a "matter which is entirely within channels and ought not interrupt business of the House."

But Speaker William Murray ruled that under standing orders of the House, only nine members have to stand in their places to bring about a discussion of urgent affairs, and all the NDP and Liberal members supported this step.

CAN'T BE FOUND

Dr. McGeer pointed out that qualified psychologists cannot be found in B.C. on short notice and that the "actual resignation of the psychologists is coupled with the threatened resignations of psychiatrists at Riverview Hospital.

"Willing as they are and anxious as they are to serve the public need, if we allow these resignations to go through we

Charts Case Trial Ordered

Featherstone

OTTAWA (CP) — Bower Edward Featherstone, 37, was committed Thursday for trial by judge and jury on two charges under the Official Secrets Act.

Magistrate Glenn E. Brink ruled at Featherstone's preliminary hearing that he is satisfied there is sufficient evidence to require the former printing craftsman to stand trial.

Featherstone is charged with obtaining and retaining classified marine charts which could be useful to an enemy while employed in the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

Formal committal for trial will be made March 29. Featherstone remains free on $12,000 property bail.

Senator Steps Down

Every team in the Canadian Football League turned its back on Commissioner Keith Davey Thursday, and the senator took his only out by immediately resigning. Disillusioned ex-commissioner—a veteran of seven weeks in the post—sets the mood of the day with a "dead march' down the long flight of stairs from the fateful meeting in Montreal.

LBJ Invites Pearson

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson has invited Prime Minister Pearson to visit him March 8 for what will be a social and personal call, the White House announced Thursday.

The two met last Aug. 21 to dedicate a pavilion in Franklin D. Roosevelt Park on New Brunswick's Campobello Island.

There will be no agenda, Tom Johnson, assistant press secretary, told reporters, but "no doubt they will discuss a number of subjects of mutual interest."

'Very Disturbed'

Diefenbaker Senses Election This Fall

SASKATOON (CP) — Opposition leader Diefenbaker said Thursday there could be a national election this fall.

He suggested at a news conference the effects of centennial celebrations could "rub off on some people" and result in a fall election.

'VERY DISTURBED'

"I am very disturbed at the degree in which the Pearson government is transforming national centennial celebrations to the confines of Liberalism."

He accused Prime Minister Pearson's government of using the centennial programming to political advantage.

Earlier in Winnipeg Premier Roblin drove to the airport to see Mr. Diefenbaker, who was passing through on his way to Prince Albert from Ottawa.

Reporters there said that during the brief meeting the two were overheard discussing the Conservative leadership convention to be held in Toronto in September.

NEW NAME

One said Mr. Diefenbaker told the premier he understood Senator Wallace McCutcheon would be announcing his candidacy for the leadership.

The Conservative leader maintained his silence as to whether he will be a candidate.

We Learn Today How We'll Pay

By RON COLLISTER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The blueprint for taxation in Canada for the next couple of decades will be disclosed today by the Carter commission on taxation.

The commission has been at work for four years, at a cost of more than $3,000,000.

It has been the costliest Royal Commission in Canadian history, except for the bi-and-bi commission.

The six-volume report, costing $40 a set, will be released tonight, after the money markets have closed for the weekend.

It is expected to contain stiff medicine for Canadians, but not necessarily medicine that the government will ask them to swallow.

For example, the commission is understood to urge a capital gains tax.

AGAINST POLICY

But, at this time in Canada's history, when the government is encouraging Canadians to take the risk and invest in Canada's growth, that could defeat national policy.

The Tories' financial critic, Waldo Monteith, said Thursday night:

"I am frightened that it might, at least in the early stages until people get used to it, deter investment in our own growth in Canada.

"A person is entitled to a certain amount of risk profit, but

Another Court Action?

Buttle Visitors Angry

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Island Editor

CAMPBELL RIVER — Officials of the municipality and water board visited Buttle Lake Thursday, and what they saw may bring another court action involving Western Mines.

The party claims it saw Western Mines acting contrary to the Pollution Control Act.

* * *

At a meeting following the trip, Campbell River Water Board instructed its lawyer to proceed through the courts to stop escapement of pollution and dumping of tailings in Buttle Lake.

It was the water board that last month got a B.C. Appeal Court ruling reversing a Pollution Control Board decision to allow dumping of tailings.

* * *

The visitors included chamber of commerce and anti-pollution society officials, in addition to members of municipal council and the water board.

"Members saw escapement of tailings into the waters of Myra Creek and construction of a pipeline in apperent anticipation of receiving permits to dump tailings into the waters of Buttle Lake," the board said.

* * *

The water board said it has had no word from either Western Mines or the attorney-general's department, whether they have abandoned their right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Until the appeal period expires about March 16, or until this right has been waived "it would be extremely unusual for the Pollution Control Board to take jurisdiction over the procedure."

Prize Offered for Good One

Cafe Apple Pie Dowdy

You can't buy a good piece of pie in any restaurant in British Columbia, the legislature was told Thursday.

* * *

Herb Capozzi (SC, Vancouver Centre) said, "There is probably no area in the world with a lower standard of food than the cafes and restaurants of British Columbia."

Outside the House, he later announced he would offer a $100 prize and a plaque "for the best restaurant-produced apple pie using B.C. apples."

B.C.'s three women cabinet ministers without portfolio, Mrs. Grace McCarthy, Mrs. Isabel Dawson and Mrs. Patricia Jordan, have agreed to serve as judges, and the contest will probably be held through the B.C. Junior Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Capozzi said.

* * *

When the Socred backbencher complained about apple pies, during debate on agricultural department estimates, Premier Bennett interjected, "The finest value any family can get in any city in B.C. is Okanagan apple pie — and along with it they should be eating cheese from Armstrong."

* * *

Vanishing Earl Puzzles Papers, Including Own

LONDON (CP) — The prolonged absence of Princess Margaret's husband, the Earl of Snowdon, on a trip to the East is beginning to cause comment in the British press.

* * *

Snowdon, who does photography for Lord Thomson's Sunday Times color supplement, went abroad at the end of January "on business." One or two days later, Princess Margaret went into hospital for a checkup.

The Evening News reports conflicting replies from Kensington Palace and The Sunday Times offices to questions about his movements.

His secretary at the palace said he was in Japan on a photographic assignment for The Sunday Times. His office in Thomson House said: "We don't know where he is."

* * *

The announcement about an assignment had not come from the newspaper, The Sunday Times spokesman said.

Snowdon's palace secretary, who handles most of his Sunday Times correspondence, said the earl is travelling with a member of The Sunday Times reporting staff and will be back in London "sometime next month."

* * *

Islanders Dug Deeply For Welsh Churches

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK — Friday

WHOSE FUND? All the money — close to $4,000 — collected on Vancouver Island for victims of the Aberfan slag heap slide last October went to refurnish five churches and a Salvation Army unit in the Welsh town.

None was directed to the official Aberfan Disaster Fund, opened by Mayor Stanley Davies of Merthyr Tydfil to handle donations from around the world.

Mrs. Phyllis Hill, president of the Victoria Welsh Society which acted as official collection agent here, confirmed Thursday that the money did not go to the official fund.

Mrs. Hill insists that right from the start the society had indicated it would decide just how the money was to be used when the drive closed, although none of the stories run in 1966 on this fund used any term but the Aberfan Disaster Fund.

Mrs. Hill explained Thursday, "The society intended to reserve the right to say how the money was to be used right from the start. It was unfortunate this misconception was not corrected when we opened our fund."

It has been three months since the fund closed.

The question naturally comes up: How much would Vancouver Islanders have given to a fund to refurnish five churches and a Salvation Army unit in Wales?

Victor Williams, past president of the Welsh Society, commented Thursday, "I was instrumental in starting this local fund. I phoned the president from the Colonist office the night of the disaster to get it rolling. There was no equivocation in my mind that this was for other than the official fund."

Training sessions at Courtenay have earned the footballers a great reputation for loving the good life, especially in the wee hours, so that location is out this year.

Lions' boss Dave Skrien is determined to have the team in shape when this season opens, especially after the poor showing last year.

NO BAR: The organizers of the local barbershop singing group say the Canadian chapters have never observed or subscribed to the racial discrimination rules set out by the U.S. parent body.

Bill Chisholm and Fred Lorenz say the Victoria group now in formation is open to any man interested in a song and good fellowship.

The new group will meet Monday at 738 Burnside and everyone is welcome. For details phone 477-6859 or 388-5319. The Canadian version of four-part harmony is open to all. The official U.S. group is still for whites only.

The Sweet Adelines report they have been fully desegregated for some time.

Any Cough That Hangs On Calls for Investigation

Your Good Health

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: My son has a cough which I believe started as a summer cold. Sometimes I think it is gone and then it returns. I try to get him to go to the doctor but he doesn't seem to want to. Is there anything one can do? He is 40 and had an X-ray last year which was negative. — L.M.

The cough that hangs on always should be investigated. It may be irritation from smoking, a chronic bronchial infection or many other things, some of them readily cured.

The danger is in assuming that a cough is trivial or just the result of a cold. Too often this excuse delays discovery of lung disease. In view of your son's age, about all you can do is urge him to be smart and play safe.

Dear Dr. Molner: What can be done to eliminate ugly acne pits and red marks? Can a dermatologist do this, or is it only the work of a plastic surgeon?—E.W.

Both do this work. That is, many although not all determinologists use dermabrasion or skin planing, which helps a great deal but cannot be expected to remove deep pits.

Dear Dr: Molner: I acquired the strange and terrible habit of pulling my eyelashes out by the roots. I have finally licked the habit but my eyes now look flimsy and very weird. Will they ever grow back?—MISS K.

Yes, they should grow back, but it will take some time. Lashes grow very slowly.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 12 and have a pot belly. When I am older will this still be there? I am five feet two.—S.T.

It's not unusual for kids your age to be a bit "potty" and then thin out as you go into a growing spurt, but I can't say whether that will happen in your case because I don't know how much you weigh or whether you get plenty of exercise.

If you are overweight, then you'll probably keep that pot, unless you start gradually getting your weight under control. Fat youngsters don't automatically turn into slim people. They stay fat — unless they start exercising more and eating less.

Unit Transfer Soon Complete

OTTAWA (CP) — Transfer of RCAF units from two French bases to Lahr in southern Germany will be completed March 31, the defence department has announced.

Abandonment of Metz and Marville, where the RCAF air division headquarters, two reconnaissance bomber squadrons and a transport unit were located, was made necessary when France decreed a deadline for NATO bases to quit the country or be taken over as French operations.

Shawnigan, UVic Eights Will Compete

Shawnigan Lake Boys School rowing teams face their first competition of the season on Sunday when they meet teams from University of Victoria in a regatta at Elk Lake starting at 2:30 p.m.

Under coach Joseph Gray, Shawnigan's oarsmen have been undergoing intensive training during the last two months.

The school plans to send a team to Europe in July and is seeking prep meets in earnest.

The school's first two eights will row against the strong University varsity team on Sunday, and the third crew will compete against the junior varsity squad.

Hearing on Injunction

Unsanitary Drug Handling Reported in Drug Plant

CLEVELAND (AP)—An inspector for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration testified in U.S. District Court Thursday that he saw the Rand cancer vaccine being handled under unsanitary conditions in a visit to the Rand Development Corp. here last December.

The witness was Gerald E. Vince of Detroit, who testified at a hearing before Judge James C. Connell. The government is seeking a permanent injunction against the manufacture and distribution of the vaccine. A temporary restraining order has been in effect since Feb. 7.

Vince said he visited the Rand laboratories Dec. 7 and 8 with Donald E. Hill, a pharmacy officer in the U.S. public health service.

NO SHIPMENTS

He said he asked for records on distribution and shipment of the vaccine and was told by H. James Rand III, head of the company, and Andrew J. Lewis, director of cancer research for Rand, that there had been no interstate shipments since Sept. 20.

He said he asked Rand if he had any knowledge of how the information was obtained for a magazine article on the vaccine in September and "he said he had no idea where the data was obtained, that he kept all names of investigators and patients confidential."

Vince said that following his inspection he offered some suggestions which Rand said "seemed reasonable and constructive."

The witness said he visited the laboratories again Dec. 22. He said he learned on that visit that Dr. James Ernest Ayre of Old Westbury, N.Y., had received some of the cancer vaccine and that "Rand apparently forgot to mention it to us" on his first inspection. He quoted Rand as saying Dr. Ayre got 200 vials of the vaccine in August or September.

MP Wonders if Rand Code Stricter Than Ordinary

By FRASER KELLY
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The 82-year-old jurist who condemned Mr. Justice Leo Landreville as "unfit" may have an unworldly sense of morality, a parliamentary impeachment committee was told Thursday.

Liberal Donald Tolmie (Welland) suggested that Ivan C. Rand, a former Supreme Court of Canada judge, had an "attitude and deportment on a much higher plane than the ordinary mortal."

He made the statement in a series of thoughtful questions he posed to Yves Fortier, counsel for the Senate-Commons committee reviewing the government's announced intention to impeach Mr. Justic Landreville, of the Ontario Supreme Court.

Landreville

Rand

FOUND UNFIT

A royal commission conducted by Mr. Rand found Mr. Justice Landreville unfit to continue on the bench because of suspicion of wrongdoing surrounding stock transactions of Northern Ontario Natural Gas Company almost 10 years ago.

In spite of Mr. Justice Landreville's request for a hearing by the Supreme Court of Canada, the committee Thursday began its detailed assessment of the Rand report.

It adjourned until Tuesday when it will likely go into closed session in order to discuss its report to the government.

Toward the end of Thursday's hearing, the MP's and Senator's turned their attention away from Mr. Landreville directly, to the contents of the Rand report.

Mr. Fortier advised them not to consider a three-page section of the report in which the commissioner launched a violent attack on the character of Mr. Justice Landreville.

Although the section was one of the most highly publicized in the report, Mr. Fortier indicated it was "flagrantly" irrelevant. Several members indicated agreement.

Mr. Tolmie began by stating that every member of the committee realized the "inherent danger of one man, no matter how eminent, judging a judge."

'STRICTER CODE?'

"Would the . . . (irrelevant portion of the report) reveal to you an attitude perhaps that isn't common to most men . . . Perhaps Mr. Rand himself has a stricter code, a stricter sense of morals . . . perhaps was not as worldly?" Mr. Tolmie asked the counsel.

"You are asking me to enter into the mind of Commissioner Rand which I would never do," Mr. Fortier replied.

But he added he felt Mr. Rand's stated standard assessment of the role of a judge seemed more important "than his like or dislike of worldly things."

He said some members of the committee might feel that the test the royal commissioner applied to Mr. Justice Landreville "may have been a very severe one."

SEVEREST TEST

He pointed out that Mr. Justice Landreville himself had told the Rand commission: "I am here to prove my innocence as I feel that is my duty . . . I want to be judged by the severest test because I have lived by the severest test."

Mr. Justice Landreville has refused to testify before the committee or call witnesses, stating he felt the proceedings are unusual.

"As any lawyer knows, one cannot argue, present evidence, then dispute jurisdiction. One either gives evidence and waives objections or stands or the objections. I stand on my objections," he said.

CAN CHANGE MIND

Before it began assessing the Rand report, the committee agreed that it would allow Mr. Justice Landreville to change his mind about testifying at any time.

As the committee rose, Mr. Justrice Landreville indicated he was pleased with the questioning and might reconsider his position over the weekend.

Mr. Fortier said the committee was particularly concerned with three specific findings in the Rand report:

- Mr. Justice Landeville's acquistion of 7,500 NONG shares gave rise to "grave suspicion of impropriety" which the judge did not remove satisfactorily;
- Evidence Mr. Justice Landreville had given to various tribunals concerning the transaction "constituted a gross contempt of these tribunals;
- Mr. Justice Landreville had breached the standard of conduct obligatory on a judge with his involvement of events "trailing odors of scandal."

Censure For Powell

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House of Representatives committee recommended Thursday that Adam Clayton Powell be seated as a House member, but that he be censured for gross misconduct and required to pay $10,000 as his punishment.

The nine-member committee also recommended that Powell be stripped of his House seniority and that salary payments to Corinne Huff, his secretary and frequent travelling companion, be terminated.

U.S. Approves Crisis Plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The 25th amendment to the U.S. constitution was formally proclaimed in ceremonial fashion Thursday and President Johnson said it would enable the United States to meet any future crisis of presidential disability.

The amendment providing for the vice-president to take over in case of disability of the president and the selection of the vice-president in the event of a vacancy in that office has been in effect since Feb. 10 when Nevada became the 38th state to ratify it.

Johnson and his two immediate predecessors, John F. Kennedy and Dwight D. Eisenhower, have had written agreements with their vice-presidents to act in the event of a chief executive's disabajlity but many constitutional experts were concerned about the legal status of such a procedure.

In the past, when a vice-president succeeded to the presidency or died or resigned, the office remained vacant until the next presidential election.

Under the new procedure, when a vacancy occurs in the vice-presidency, the president shall select a new one who is subject to confirmation by a majority of both the House and Senate.

Massive Trap Forged

SAIGON (AP)—About 45,000 United States troops and scores of jet bombers hammered Thursday at the Viet Cong's main bailiwick, the jungled Zone C, in the most massive offensive of the Vietnam war.

Infantrymen were deployed to form a huge horseshoe-shaped trap, which American officers hoped would catch the Viet Cong's political leaders as well as military units that have ranged the area for 20 years.

More than 10 per cent of all American troops in Vietnam were committed to the drive, 60 miles northwest of Saigon and encompassing a 250-square-mile area of Tay Ninh province, adjacent to neutralist Cambodia's frontier. They faced only light sniper fire Thursday.

PARACHUTE JUMP

The drive, called operation Junction City, was launched before dawn Wednesday with the first American combat parachute jump since the Korean War.

The scope of the new operation, the third in four months within Zone C, came to light on a day that also saw disclosure that more American and Communist troops were killed in combat last week than in any week since the bloody battle of the Ia Drang Valley Nov. 14-20, 1965. U.S. headquarters said 111 Americans and 2,029 Communist were killed, compared to the record for the 1965 period, 240 Americans and 2,262 Communists.

SORTIE RECORD

U.S. headquarters reported a single-day record of 575 sorties by American tactical bombers over South Vietnam Wednesday, including Zone C strikes.

U.S. B-52 jet Stratofortresses paved the way for operation Junction City with four raids in quick succession earlier this week and another Thursday. Lighter planes dumped hundreds of tons of explosives in 416 sorties Wednesday and Thursday.

A fleet of nearly 250 helicopters ferried infantrymen into positions flanking the battle area. Other soldiers moved on foot.

Woman Silenced

Death in New Orleans Prompts Fright, Flight

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—David W. Ferrie's death has created fear among some people who claimed to have information relating to Ferrie or Lee Harvey Oswald in connection with the assassination of U.S. President John F. Kennedy.

Ferrie, described by District Attorney Jim Garrison as a prime informant in his investigation of the assassination, was found dead in bed Wednesday. A preliminary autopsy report attributed death to a brain hemorrhage. A coroner's report Thursday ruled out murder, leaving suicide, natural causes or accidental death as possibilities.

LEAVES TOWN

A woman who was about to give The Associated Press details she said related to Oswald's activities in New Orleans was frightened into silence.

Another person on the periphery of the case, David Lewis, a bus station baggage clerk, dropped out of sight Wednesday night. Neighbors said the Lewis family suddenly had left town. Lewis had told reporters he feared for the safety of his wife and four children because of his knowledge of a possible conspiracy to kill Kennedy.

However, Lewis appeared at the district attorney's office Thursday. Before going into Garrison's office he said:

KNEW OSWALD

"I'm not worried about myself, but I am about my family. Maybe there has been too much said about me already, but they know my name and know what I look like and they know where I work, so that's it."

A former private investigator, Lewis claims to have known Oswald, the man named by the Warren commission as Kennedy's assassin.

Garrison, who created international headlines by launching his own investigation into the assassination, said Ferrie's death was a temporary setback to his investigation. He said he felt Ferrie was on the brink of producing significant information. Nevertheless, Garrison remained optimistic that his investigation would produce results.

IN FILES

Ferrie told the FBI in 1963 that he knew neither Oswald nor Jack Ruby, the man who killed Oswald at a Dallas police tation. The statement is included in the Warren commission files in the National Archives in Washington.

The woman who was frightened into silence earlier had told an AP reporter that she was working for a New Orleans firm in the summer of 1963 when a person using a name sounding like "Hidell" purchased some automobile tires. Hidell is the name Oswald used when he purchased by mail a Mannlicher-Carcano rifle identified by the Warren commission as the weapon used to slay President Kennedy.

Information developed by the Warren commission, which made the official assassination investigation, indicated there was strong evidence that Oswald did not know how to drive an automobile.

NEVER HEARD

The woman said she did not know whether the customer had driven a vehicle. She said the tires were for a panel truck.

The woman said that after President Kennedy was assassinated, she voiced her suspicions to the FBI.

One aspect of Oswald's activities reported being investigated by Garrison concerns a report that Oswald tried to communicate with anti-Castro Cubans in the New Orleans area to train guerrilla forces.

Hellyer Apologizes

OTTAWA (CP)—Defence Minister Hellyer apologized Thursday night to Lt.-Gen. Frank Fleury, retired comptroller-general of the armed forces.

The minister said in the Commons defence committee he regretted saying anything about the general in an airport interview at London, Ont., Wednesday.

Gen. Fleury testified to the committee Wednesday that disloyalty in defence headquarters last year made him feel like vomiting and that security of information was practically non-existent.

DIFFERENT WORD

Mr. Hellyer later was quoted as saying that Gen. Fleury was primarily responsible for the situation he had described.

Thursday night Mr. Hellyer said he had stated that Gen. Fleury was partially responsible but that "something put in primarily."

"I regret having said anything. I apologize to Gen. Fleury."

Conscription Guess Said Nonsense

OTTAWA (CP)—A defence department spokesman Thursday described as nonsense a prediction that a conscription issue would be almost inevitable within two years if armed forces unification is carried through.

The spokesman said there is absolutely no intention on the part of the government to impose conscription.

The spokesman, William M. Lee, former group captain who is executive assistant to Defence Minister Hellyer, said there is absolutely no intention on the part of the government to impose conscription.

He called predictions on the subject only a bogey raised by people who wanted to use emotionalism to oppose unification.

The prediction that a conscription issue would probably arise under unification was made in the Winnipeg Free Press by publisher R. S. Malone, a Second World War brigadier.

He wrote that it would be "foolhardy in the extreme blandly to assume that recruiting, poor as it already is, will not drastically deteriorate further under unification of the regular services."

The defence department spokesman said recruiting was up last year to the highest level since 1963.

He said Canadian servicemen and women enjoyed an unparalleled reputation throughout the world for competence, professionalism and adherence to duty.

The voluntary recruiting system had served the country well and the government intended to continue it.

Riddled Theory

ONE OF THE few hard facts which has emerged from the foggy atmosphere of the Commons defence committee hearings on the armed forces' unification bill is that the experiment has been forced upon the country against the advice of senior officers in every branch of the services.

Like the "mad Queen," wherever the minister of national defence, Mr. Paul Hellyer, has encountered opposition or even disagreement among his officers his immediate reaction has been: "Off with their heads." As Air Vice-Marshal M. M. Hendrick put it, they were required "to toe the line" or, one way or another, leave the services. AVM Hendrick was chief of the air defence council.

Air Marshal Clare Annis, chief of Canada's technical services until his retirement, warned that it would take years to achieve the integration of the supply services, let alone the unification envisioned in the present bill.

He believes the minister is proceeding "at a rash pace," as do so many others in and out of the services, and adds that there is still no evidence that "integration," apart from "unification," will work.

General Charles Foulkes, for 13 years chairman of the chiefs of staff committee, quarrels with the minister's entire concept of a "trouble-shooting" mobile command and condemns the single rank structure which is part of the unification program. "I would abhor being called an admiral."

Lt.-General Robert W. Moncel, vice-chief of staff, lost to the services of his country long before his retirement time, like so many others, declares unification to be "moving on an uncharted course at high speed towards a dim destination."

It was he who was responsible for drafting no fewer than four plans for unification, and the one now proposed for adoption, he has told the defence committee, "I rejected out of hand."

The minister, he declares, believes all opponents of his unification theories are "stupid."

Lt.-Gen. Frank Fleury, who was comptroller-general of the integrated command when he retired three years before his time, speaking "with reluctance" before the committee Wednesday, attacked as "indiscreet" the speed with which Mr. Hellyer is trying to "unify" the navy, army and air force arms.

It was this officer who brought into full view a policy of the minister of defence which others hinted at: his by-passing of men in command to effect his demands through those of lesser rank but easier susceptibility.

"There were officers working for me," he said, "who knew more, or said they knew more, or thought they knew more about what was in the minister's mind than I did."

It was this sort of disruption of morale and command which appears to have led to what the general saw as "near disloyalty," the "practically non-existent" security situation, and which frequently so upset him that he "literally felt like vomiting."

The views of the "retired" admirals are too well known to make it necessary to review them. It is sufficient to recall that Rear-Admiral Jeffry V. Brock, first of the officer casualties in Mr. Hellyer's elimination of opposition, recalls that 30 or 40 senior people were "fired, retired or otherwise disposed of," and that some won promotion by acceptance of the minister's integration and unification plans.

On the basis of the evidence of so many distinguished men, acknowledged experts in their various fields, and the doubts and fears of so many others who will not be heard, surely some Liberal members in the House of Commons will have second thoughts about the safety, even the sanity, of a unification plan which even its exponents admit to be an experiment.

Since the Commons are expected to vote on the measure strictly on party lines it may be too much to hope that the bill will be defeated at third reading. Even so, surely no responsible minister can dare to ignore the warnings. If he is bent on the destruction of the whole military system as we have known it and the building in its place of a structure initially conceived by civilian minds, surely he must proceed with less fanatic haste and with all the caution so strange an adventure demands of reason.

Distant Comparison

THE SOVIET UNION is generally reckoned as being among the world's most sports-conscious countries. The extent to which this description is true is indicated by some statistics presented in the Soviet News Bulletin published by the press office of the U.S.S.R. Embassy in Ottawa. Today, the bulletin says, there are more than 46 million sportsmen in the Union (or one in five of the population) and they have at their disposal 30,000 gyms, 64,000 football pitches, 365,000 playgrounds and 2,400 stadiums, among other facilities.

It would be difficult to assess how many "sportsmen" Canada has, by comparison, especially not knowing the Russian definition—whether it includes only members of sports teams and societies or all engaged in athletic and physical recreational pursuits, organized or otherwise. Nor has searching of reference books disclosed any summation of what Canadians possess in the way of gyms, football pitches, playgrounds, stadiums, ice rinks, swimming pools, tennis courts, golf courses and the like, though it might be reasonably suspected that we are less strong on gymnasiums and football pitches, in relation to population, than the Russians.

But there is another measure in the bulletin item that enables some comparison to be made on a local basis, with not unsatisfactory results.

"It has been established that the sports facilities in the new neighboring units should be commissioned at the same time with the tenanting of dwelling houses," it says. "There should be a stadium, a gym, a swimming pool and a shooting range built per every 30,000 to 50,000 of the population."

This would mean that Greater Victoria should have, to equal such a standard, at least four of each of these facilities. But allowing for Canadian preferences in sports, it is not bad by comparison that if the Saanich recreation program goes through, the metropolitan area will before long have three public swimming pools, three ice arenas and two stadiums, as well as a good assortment of other public, semi-private and private athletic accommodations.

Endless Journey—III

Mountain and Desert Will Surrender When Hungry Man Builds Megalopolis

By ARNOLD TOYNBEE

This is the concluding article in a series in which the traveller views the changing patterns of the continents.

THE bona fide traveller is one whose object in travelling is to see something of the world on his way. His destination is of no consequence to him, and the thought of reaching it is abhorrent.

Speed is the enemy of observation. For the bona fide traveller, the ideal means of conveyance is his own pair of feet. On foot the traveller is the master of the situation. He can stop or go at will, as the exploration of the world requires. He can scramble up or down a four-foot-high cliff — an obstacle that stops a mule dead. In a jet plane, flying at an altitude of 30,000 feet at a speed of 600 miles an hour, he is worse placed for seeing the world than if he were sitting at home and looking out of a back window; for there he would at least have a chance of spying a cat or a sparrow.

From one of the portholes of a conventional plane, the pseudo-traveller is looking down for much of the time on the upper surface of the bottommost layer of the clouds that veil the earth's surface. If there is any music in the plane's engines then, it is as inaudible to bored passengers as the music of the spheres. However, there are rifts in the cloud through which the air-passenger can snatch glimpses of the works of nature and of man. If he flies often enough, these glimpses coalesce in his memory into a composite picture, like a mosaic, and, as the picture forms, you can imagine the plane begins to sing. I know three of its songs, and I guess that it has a fourth song in its repertory, that it will be singing to my great-grandchildren. (I now have one.)

For me, the most thrilling of the plane's songs is the song of the fields. This is an ode to man the domesticator of nature. The natural world is ungeometrical. None of its lines is straight; none of its curves is visual expression of mathematical equations. Man has imposed his geometry on the earth's cultivable surface.

It is true that, even today, when agriculture is perhaps 8,000 or 9,000 years old, one can find tracts of fertile soil that are still virgin, but they have become rare. Over most of the lands that are capable of bearing a crop, the husbandman has spread the embroidered mantle of agriculture long ago.

On the irrigated lands, the geometry is meticulous. Fly over Egypt, over the Sudanese Jazimah, over Thailand, over Java, over the Punjab, or over those patches of mountainous Japan in which agriculture is possible: what you see below you is an anticipation of a modern abstract painting.

In the less pedantic geometry of the fields that drink the rain, colored crops vary with the clime. Here it will be rye, here wheat, here barley, here kaoliang, here maize; but the pattern is as constant as the Gregorian chant of the Catholic Church, which moves your heart in Santiago de Chile because it is the same chant that you have heard in Santiago de Compostela and in Rome itself.

The song of the world-wide pattern of the rain-fed fields is a song of mankind's unity and innocence. In language, man's world is a babel; in politics it is a pandemonium: but in the pattern of the fields it is a uniform world-order, and the activity that has created this world-wide agricultural order is an innocent one. When man is playing the politician or the soldier, he is malignant and maleficent. When he is raising food for his fellow-creatures by tilling the ground, he is benevolent and beneficent.

But the plane has two other songs. There is the song of the pastures and the hunting-grounds, in which man is nature's pensioner on sufferance; and there is the song of the wilderness, in which man has no place at all. In both these songs, man's role is that of an aggressor.

You can still catch the song of the pastures as the aircraft catapults you over Kazakhstan or Outer Mongolia or Western Manchuria or Central Australia. But this song is a swan-song today; for husbandman Cain, who passes for an innocent on his own ground, becomes a murderer when he trespasses on shepherd Abel's domain — and Cain is plowing up Abel's pasture-lands ruthlessly today. Abel's present-day tragedy is the penalty of his weak-mindedness three quarters of a millennium ago. The military genius of the Mongol war-lord Chingis (Genghis Khan) gave the pastoral nomad a momentary lordship over the Old World's fields from Russia to Burma and from Iraq to China inclusive. And Chingis thought of using this fleeting opportunity to make the world safe for pastoral nomadism once for all. He planned to exterminate the world's peasantry and to create new pastures out of what hitherto had been fields. He was dissuaded by his Chinese mentor, Yeliu Chu-tsai. His argument was a fiscal one — no peasantry, no revenue. This hard-boiled consideration prevailed; and, in the Old World's heartland, Chingis's descendants are paying, today, the price of Chingis's short-term Realpolitik.

Today, the only pastures and hunting-grounds that are not threatened are those on which crops cannot be induced to grow. Fly over Central Australia, where rain falls once in every three years and where each cattle-station has to be 30 miles away from its nearest neighbor if either station is to provide a living for a single family.

Fly over the Dānakil desert in Ethiopia. Beyond the limits of irrigation from the Aswah River, those Isa girls who are tending a couple of camels or a dozen goats in the desiccated bush are in no danger of being evicted by Gala plowmen.

And then there is the song of the wilderness, I have heard the plane sing this song as it soared over the Peruvian Andes, while we passengers imbibed oxygen for dear life. I have heard the same song as the plane soared over the Himalayas, while, through the machine's conductive floor, the cold shot up the passengers' legs from the 22,000-feet-high peaks below us.

The same song is sung at sea-level by the tropical forests. I have heard it over Amazonian Peru, and I have heard it again over lowland Guatemala and lowland Sumatra. In these virgin forests the trees stand so thick that there is no room for a dead tree to fall. Its bleached skeleton is held upright by its living neighbors, gleaming ghostly white against their exuberant green.

Here the air is man's, and perhaps the water — but not the ground. This belongs to the trees and to such non-human living creatures as the trees accept as their parasites. The desert—if it is barren enough — is as effective as the forest or the sierra for keeping nature inviolate. Fly over the Nullarbor Desert in Southern Australia, or over the strips of lifeless sand that alternate with the strips of irrigated fields in coastal Peru. In the utter desert, man finds no place to rest his foot. He can merely traverse the desert, not live in it; and he traverses it at his peril.

But man the husbandman has now turned into man the technician; and, in face of the untamed wilderness, the technician is not moved to humility and resignation. He takes the wilderness as a stimulating challenge; and he plots to move mountains — not by faith, but by science. Like the song of the pastures and the hunting-grounds, the song of the wilderness is destined to die away; and, though even man the technician must eat, the song of the fields is going to become a minor accompaniment to the new song that will fill the air in my great-grandchildren's day.

This new song will be the song of megalopolis, the world-wide city that is going to envelop the earth's solid surface in its python-coils as ubiquitously as the earth's envelope of clouds. In my great-grandchildren's generation, Methuselah, if he still has the heart to fly, will no longer recognize the Nullarbor Desert or the Empty Quarter of Arabia or the Himalayas or the Andes or the Amazonian or the Guatemalan or the Sumatran forest. I can prophesy this because — in my own generation, I have lived to see the Greek mountains that once bounded Athens and the lovely Japanese countryside that once flanked the Shimonoseki Straits obliterated by a plague of streets and houses that pullulate as rapidly as the matted water-weeds that choke the channel of the White Nile.

Present-day Athens and Tokyo are two precocious growing-points of the megalopolis of a future that is bearing down on an unready human race. Already, I can catch faint cadences of the plane's song of megalopolis as it lands at Athens airport. I am glad that I have travelled at a time when the plane's dominant song was still the song of the fields.

Ministry of Safety as Accident Check

AT long last we, the general public, have become aware of the need, and a crying for, a halt to the needless waste of human life, on the nation's highways. What is the answer friends? Even though I have been closely associated with accident prevention and investigation all my adult life, I do not know. However all of us must continue to put our heads together and seek the answer. What is apparent, however, is that, "attitude is the key to accidents."

The Colonist showed its concern by publishing my thoughts on the subject last Dec. 6. My suggestion then, and still is, that vehicle accident prevention must become a child of the government . . . both nationally and provincially. Past individual safety councils and committees have failed to get the message across to us, the general public, so it is very clear that a different approach is required. Hence my suggestion.

May it be proposed that B.C. lead the way by creating a provincial accident prevention agency . . . a division of the motor vehicle branch, if you like. However, given a choice, I personally prefer a separate safety ministry. A good job for one of our recently elected lady cabinet ministers.

Briefly the function of the agency would be to promote vehicle accident prevention, carry out research, and to forward recommendations to such cabinet ministers as attorney-general, finance, highways, etc.

Some areas requiring immediate study:

(a) It being mandatory that effective Jan. 1, 1968, that all first-time applicants take and pass formal driver training, given by a government approved driver training school prior to taking the formal examination. The fee to be paid by the applicant.

(b) That during the remainder of 1968, a program whereby all other than first-time applicants be processed through the above driver training school. If after a reasonable length of training time, their operator's licence would be cancelled if they, the candidates, could not attain the required standard. Naturally those who have already been through a formal driver training school could be exempt.

(c) That traffic safety training become a part of the curriculum of all public and high schools.

(d) Strengthened law enforcement by increasing of fines and jail terms.

(e) The formation of a highway patrol.

(f) As decided by the courts, offenders to be subjected to driver re-training . . . at personal expense.

(g) A study into the reasons why the age limit of applicants should not be raised to 18 . . . or 21.

(h) A study into the setting of an upper age limit.

(j) A full-time, vehicle safety lane . . . to check roadworthiness.

I am sure that you could add to the list.

A VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS.

Growl of Protest

I would like to endorse, wholeheartedly, the views expressed by your correspondent Merle Stevens with regard to Saanich dogs.

By all means go after the dangerous ones, the sheep-killers, the chicken-thieves, the dogs who are known to be unreliable with humans. But to go hog-wild and impound every single canine, small or large, sitting quietly outside his own gate, or trotting homeward after a little stroll, is extraordinarily muddled thinking and will accomplish nothing in the world but the making of many enemies among law-abiding citizens who know their pets to be small, friendly, and completely harmless.

For Saanich to charge $6 for the rescue of an impounded animal, even one wearing the licence which is absolutely no protection against interference, is nothing more nor less than a racket.

People's Choice

In reference to statements by the B.C. prime minister to Peter C. Newman: he has gone beyond all reason. It is not Mr. Bennett's choice to say we can or can not go it alone.

Having gone so far as a choice of title, the Dominion of British Columbia, and having it printed for publication is coming very close to dictatorship.

As for becoming a new member of the Commonwealth as a separate entity brings up a very moot question. Would it be welcome?

This writer does not think so. My reason is that both syndicate columnists and news items lead me to believe that the Commonwealth is in a very weak position. To quote just one item. Lord Gladwyn, a former British ambassador (Jan. 17, 1967): The Commonwealth is a myth.

A lot of people will not accept this. I do. Just analyze past and current events. They may not be pleasant reading but we cannot escape reality.

Mr. Bennett would do much better if he remembers that the province is part of Canada, that its people are Canadians and that is is the people in the province that have the voice as to our nationality and where we are going.

Whiff of Corruption

U.S. Disillusioned By CIA's Chicanery

By ANTHONY HOWARD

THE uproar provoked by the U.S. state department's official admission that for the past 15 years the cloak-and-dagger Central Intelligence Agency has been secretly financing the main student organization in the U.S. shows no sign of dying down here.

The 1,500,000-strong National Student Association has been going through its own private Gethsemane on whether or not to wind up the entire organization. Protests continue to stream forth from congressmen and senators on Capitol Hill. Even the White House has been forced to announce a full inquiry into the whole issue of CIA involvement in U.S. education.

The outcry has in many ways been a peculiarly American phenomenon. Communist countries, after all, have for years poured treasure from their national coffers into organized student activity. And no one has ever doubted that the various and successive international youth festivals (nearly always held in Eastern Europe) have been largely politically-inspired occasions. Why, then, the present sense of American outrage at the revelation that the U.S. has seen no alternative but to play the game to the other side's rules?

The explanation may well lie not so much in the substance of what the CIA has done as in its manner of doing it. It has, in fact, succeeded in trampling over a number of separate sensitive nerve areas at once.

By getting the subventions accepted in the first place it shattered the national dream of the idealistic purity of the young. And perhaps most seriously, by initially trying to persuade the present student officials of the organization to deny the charges when they were first made in a Left-wing magazine, the CIA reopened the whole angry argument about truth in government.

Superficially it has been the liberal, if also ultra-respectable, National Student Association that has been the main casualty of the incident. That — even when making its discreet protests against the Vietnam war — it was all the time in secret receipt of government funds is, no doubt, bad enough. Even more ominous, however, has been the discovery that a high proportion of the privileged few student-officers who actually knew about the existence of the arrangement went on very rapidly to occupy high government positions.

One today is the U.S. ambassador in Chile, another is American aid director in Peru, a third is President Johnson's assistant-postmaster general. How many others went straight into the service of the CIA itself will presumably never by known.

It is this uncomfortable feeling that the Central Intelligence Agency must deliberately have set out — as one congressional protest put it — "to corrupt the largest student organization in the largest democracy in the world" that explains why its own survival as a law-unto-itself secret branch of government is now under serious threat.

For some time, at least since the Bay of Pigs fiasco against Castro's Cuba in 1961, the demand has grown that the CIA should confine its activities to those suggested by its name — that it should, in fact, be an intelligence-gathering agency and nothing more. For many Americans the most welcome consequence of the current controversy would certainly be a radical curtailment, if not an acutal ending, of the CIA's whole covert role.

Risky Experiment

Democracy Abandoned In Brazil

By LOUIS E. STEIN
from Rio de Janeiro

THE Brazilian revolution, being wrought in the name of democracy, has taken a swing toward authoritarianism that could lead almost anywhere.

The new constitution that becomes effective March 15 abandons the democratic ideal of governmental balance of power. A new press law that was approved by Congress at the same time will make the president virtually untouchable by newspapers.

The constitution eliminates all pretense of what Brazilians like to call 'harmonious independence" of the legislature, courts and executive. Henceforth, authority of the president will overshadow that of Congress and the judiciary.

In theory, the courts will remain the final arbiters. But the president may forestall court action by declaring a state of siege on his own initiative. Individual guarantees and right of assembly would be suspended during the state of siege and the authorities could impose censorship of the press and mails for the duration.

The president also may intervene in any state.

He also will maintain control over public expenditures since Congress will be forbidden to make any changes in the budget that would entail an increase in spending. The clause concerning public finances is so worded that Congress will be required to accept the budget as proposed by the president or reject it outright.

All other money bills, even appropriations to alleviate regional calamity, must be initiated by the president.

The constitution may be amended by an absolute majority of Congress. But no changes are foreseen for the early future. The pro-government Alianca Renovadora Nacional (Arean) controls about 70 per cent of the seats in the newly-elected house of deputies that has four years to run.

The opposition Brazilian Democratic Movement (MDB) is trying to muster enough signatures to present amendment proposals immediately after inauguration of President-elect Arthur da Costa e Silva, also scheduled for March 15.

The revolution that ousted the Communist-oriented regime of former President Joao Goulart was a departure from the classic Latin American coup. It was a popular movement backed by traditionally democratic armed forces.

But whether they planned to or not, the armed forces found they had stepped into the vacuum in the absence of civilian authority. Revolutionary leader Humberto Castello Branco became a reluctant strongman when Congress elected him interim president.

From the outset he acted with moderation in trying to carry out the revolutionary program to clean out corruption and subversion, stabilize the economy and stimulate development.

In his final shift toward authoritarianism he exacted the new constitution and press law from Congress less than two months before he was due to leave office.

★ ★ ★

The movement that overthrew Goulart was just the beginning of the Brazilian revolution. During three years in office Castello Branco has obtained from Congress the laws needed to enact long-range reforms aimed at creating a flexible society based on social justice. These include land reform, tax reform, administrative reform, education reform and many others.

The man in the street is hardly aware of this structure that could have a dramatic beneficial effect on his future and that of his children.

Full impact of some of the provisions will not be felt until a generation hence. They will never bear fruit unless there is continuity in government.

This is basically the reason Castello Branco and his economic czar, Planning Minister Roberto Campos, feel that Costa e Silva also must be armed with authority to resist pressure from various special groups whose corns have been pinched.

First World War: Fifty years ago today — In 1917 — Gen. Sir Stanley Maude's Mesopotamian army captured Kut-el-Amara; the Turks abandoned Sanna-i-yat and lost 1,700 prisoners and much equipment. The British in France occupied Petit Miraumont on the Ancre.

Organization of American States Membership

Trinidad Catalyst for Canada?

Admission into Organization of American States membership Thursday of the Caribbean nation of Trinidad and Tobago, former British colonies, is being interpreted here as incentive for Canada to join.

Trinidad and Tobago were admitted by unanimous vote at a special OAS council meeting in Buenos Aires as the 21st OAS member — and the first from the Commonwealth. Until now the United States had been the only other English-speaking member.

Four other Caribbean English-speaking countries are interested — Jamaica, Barbados, Guyana and Antigua, which is getting its full independence from Britain this month. All five, as well as Canada, have had observers at the Buenos Aires meeting.

★ ★ ★

The meeting in Buenos Aires has been involved in discussions about promoting Latin American economic integration with U.S. aid. But the U.S., represented by State Secretary Dean Rusk for the first week, resisted invitations for substantial additional American aid commitments. Self-help as the primary target was emphasized instead with appropriate U.S. assistance.

By ARCH MacKENZIE From Washington

OAS applicants need a two-thirds majority to gain entry and Canada's name is being automatically linked with the Caribbean countries in dispatches from Buenos Aires.

The Christian Science Monitor says that "hanging suspended over all the discussions about new OAS members is the question of Canada."

It notes that assorted Latin American natios have publicly favored Canadian membership, as has Secretary-General Jose A. Mora, "partly as a counter-weight to U.S. influence in the OAS system."

★ ★ ★

"Although Canada and the U.S. often agree on international issues, the Latin American nations with long-established constitutional systems have noted that Canada often takes an independent course in hemisphere affairs, which sometimes differs from the U.S. view," says The Monitor.

"The possibility now is, however, that admission of English-speaking 'mini-nations' of the Caribbean may play a role in forcing Canada's hand on admission."

Canada has been stepping up its Latin American aid in the form of loans at small or no interest, granted via the Inter-American Development Bank. It has been giving more substantial aid to the Caribbean.

Thant, Goldberg On The Move

Peace Hunts Soft-Pedalled

By LOUIS B. FLEMING from United Nations

Arthur Goldberg and U Thant have flown off to Asia, one in search of peace in Vietnam, the other in search of peace of mind.

Thant's trip is a vacation, but his insistence that it is solely for relaxation has not halted speculation that somehow or other he will turn it into a peace initiative.

★ ★ ★

Goldberg's trip is a "fact-finding" mission — his own terms — as distinct from a peace mission. And it is not likely to become anything more. Goldberg made clear in his Feb. 10 address at Howard University that there are only three alternatives to peace-making in Vietnam:

- A peace conference.
- Secret negotiations through direct contact or a third party (he indicated he favors this alternative).
- A military de-escalation that slowly brings the war to a halt without formal diplomatic contacts to hasten the process.

It is unlikely that he would be able to influence the course of any of these alternatives.

His itinerary around the western rim of the Pacific will avoid many capitals, like Rangoon, where he might have made covert contact with the other side. He will get an earful of pretty predictable views in Seoul, Taipei and Saigon, with some minor variations in Tokyo and Manila.

One cannot help but wonder, as a matter of fact, if Johnson is not dispatching Goldberg to the battlefield to add some hawkish pragmatism to Goldberg's dovish inclinations.

Thant

Goldberg

But this is not to discount the impact of Goldberg on some of the Asians, not the least South Vietnamese Premier Nguyen Cao Ky.

"He is a very persuasive man," one of Goldberg's staff men said in describing the American ambassador.

His dialogue with Ky could be interesting. Goldberg has committed the United States to "genuine negotiations" and has recalled Johnson's promise of "concessions on both parts." Ky's commitment to negotiations is equivocal.

Thant has had an even more difficult time keeping himself involved in the Vietnam problem.

He accepted Hanoi's statement of August, 1964, rejecting an invitation to appear before the security council, as the death knell of any initiative by the United Nations itself. But this only intensified his personal efforts. He arranged that very month for a secret meeting between North Vietnam and the United States in Rangoon. The United States refused.

Details of subsequent interventions by Thant with Washington, published after the death of Ambassador Adlai Stevenson in July, 1965, led to a break in relations between the Secretary-General and Hanoi that has made any active role difficult.

This has not discouraged Thant from repeating his three-point peace plan. The first and key point is an unconditional cessation of the bombing of North Vietnam by the United States, to be followed by mutual decrease in hostilities and by recognition of all parties in peace talks.

Thant apparently has felt that unswerving reiteration of this plan would serve two purposes: the persuasion of American opinion and the reassurance to North Vietnam that neither Thant nor the United Nations is a puppet of Washington and both can be trusted to help make peace.

★ ★ ★

A recent opinion poll showed that Thant had succeeded in persuading about 40 per cent of the Americans to support his plan, but certainly not the White House. As far as North Vietnam is concerned, the White House has been delighted only with the first and last of Thant's points and has rejected the idea of a mutual reduction of hostilities. And Hanoi has shown no enthusiasm for Thant as a mediator.

Detente Pleas Nationalistic

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS, from Bonn

While the two super-powers speak hopefully now of being able by treaty to halt the spread of nuclear arms, they continue to lead two opposing military alliances with a whole panoply of such weapons facing each other in divided Europe.

The mixture of cold war vituperative and expressions of hope for a spring thaw detente between East and West now being exchanged at the disarmament conference in Geneva have really nothing to do with any thought of ending this confrontation of fearsome hardware in the foreseeable future.

It is always interesting, therefore, when the political leaders on one side of the alliance or the other speak of the desirability or the faint possibility of eventually dismantling the two alliances opposing military establishments — the West's North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the Soviet bloc Warsaw Pact.

Strangely enough, the suggestion is more often heard from the eastern alliance than from the West. And the recent revival of this proposal by Soviet premier Alexei Kosygin produced the desired headlines, as though it had never been mentioned before.

But it has been said before by various leading figures in the Soviet bloc. The interpretation one must give to the suggestion depends upon which of these leaders has brought it up.

The proposal first was raised by the former Soviet Leader, Nikita Khrushchev, as a part of his great world disarmament offensive. And there is little change in the basic reason for its revival now by the new Soviet leadership.

★ ★ ★

The Soviet premise is fairly simple. The breakup of NATO would mean the withdrawal of the United States and its nuclear umbrella from Western Europe while the Soviet Union, with its exclusive hold on the East bloc nuclear arsenal, would still be in Eastern Europe whether the Warsaw Pact existed or not.

There would thus be no strategic loss, and in fact there would be a considerable Soviet gain in such a bargain.

In the Western camp, President de Gaulle of France has pulled out of the NATO military alliance in the belief that the spring thaw has already arrived and there is no longer any threat from the camp of the Warsaw Pact.

The desire for a thaw, which is too often taken for the thaw itself, has made it almost as difficult for the Soviet Union to keep its Warsaw Pact alliance in full harness as it has been for the United States and its European allies to maintain a solid military posture.

When Romania's Communist chief Nicolae Ceausescu talks about the desirability of the dissolution of both military blocs he quite obviously has in mind his own peculiar reasons. And they seem to be even more obviously not the same reasons Kosygin has.

For the Romanian leader has taken a strongly nationalistic line within the Communist camp. It is his desire for greater independence and freedom of movement within that camp that inspires him to suggest that both sides pack up and go to their respective homes.

Poland's leaders, with their inborn hatred and fears of the Germans, are the only ones in the Eastern bloc who do not lightly toss out suggestions that might mean the breakup of the alliance which has been named after their capital.

★ ★ ★

The call for the abolishment of the opposing military pacts will no doubt be heard again and often. It would be well, however, to take heed who has made the proposal — and whether the benefits will be for both sides.

Laser Breakthrough?

By BRYAN SILCOCK, from London

Ever since the laser made its dramatic debut six years ago, there has been talk of its fantastic possibilities in communications. In theory, a single laser beam could carry millions of TV programs simultaneously.

Now, scientists at Standard Telecommunication Laboratories in Harlow think they may be able to develop a commercial laser communications system.

The secret is the optical waveguide — a glass fibre of fragile appearance, hardly thicker than a human hair—which has already been shown to be capable of carrying 200,000 telephone conversations at once in the form of pulses of laser light.

There are still technical problems. Impurities in the glass absorb too much of the light travelling along the fibre. losses are more than 10 times higher than they will have to be in a commercial system.

Another problem is that the fibres need a core of a different kind of glass only about a hundreth of the diameter of the whole, so they are very tricky to make. And even when the right fibres are available, ways will have to be worked out to launch the light pulses from the laser along the fibre, and to decode the signals at the other end. A commercial system could be available in five or 10 years.

The value of this remarkable development would be enormous capacity at comparatively low cost. An early application would be to increase the capacity of busy trunk routes. But there are more exciting possibilities.

Before long there will be a need for an electronic communications grid with an immense capacity for handling the high-speed exchange of data between computers, video-telephone traffic, facsimile transmission and TV distribution, beside the standard telecommunications services of today.

Individual homes will be linked to the grid as automatically as they are connected with gas and electric supplies today.

★ ★ ★

There are other implications. The economies of communications satellites depend on the fact that they can provide a large number of channels more cheaply than conventional cables. But where international cables now carry at most a few hundred telephone channels, an optical (or laser) cable would be able to carry millions. With this kind of competition, the prospects for communications satellites will look very different.

London Sunday Times

★ ★ ★

Secret Is Narrowness

The uniqueness of the laser beam as a communications link is its ability to remain narrow and hence strong over vast distances. Scientists have used a laser beam to illuminate a 10-mile-diameter spot on the moon's surface, a distance of nearly 240,000 miles. Such a feat is impossible with ordinary light whose waves are disorganized.

Scientists could send a beam of laser light from Mars to earth and it would not spread more than 200 miles.

Birth Control, NATO Range of Subjects For UVic 'House'

Divorce reform, changes in the birth control law and Canadian withdrawal from NATO and NORAD will be proposed Friday evening at the opening of the University of Victoria's second model parliament.

The parliament is dominated by a New Democratic Party minority government, chosen on the basis of a campus election last week.

The NDP, led by "prime minister" John Thies, a fourth-year political science student, holds 20 of the 50 seats. The NDP has gained over last year, when it formed a minority government with only 16 seats.

GBIT OPPOSITION

Liberals form the official opposition with nine seats. The Conservatives have eight, Social Credit eight, and Christian Atheists five.

University Chancellor Richard Wilson will read the Speech from the Throne at 8 p.m. Friday in the auditorium of the Young Building on the university's former Lansdowne campus. The public is welcome.

OTHER SITTINGS

The parliament will sit again at 2 p.m. Saturday, and will wind up with an evening sitting at 8 p.m.

The NDP will introduce a bill calling for elimination to references to birth control in the Criminal Code.

The party also proposes reforming divorce by making marriage a contract, with violation of it grounds for dissolution.

Jobless Total Higher

LONDON (AP) — The number of unemployed in Britain rose to 602,844 this month, the highest since April, 1963, when it was 604,619, the labor ministry said Thursday.

Lump Sum Grant 'Never Considered'

OTTAWA (CP)—Advancing family allowances in a lump sum as a down payment for housing or anything else isn't being considered, a federal official said Thursday.

He said that unpredictable factors like death or divorce would make such a scheme an administrative nightmare.

He was replying to a suggestion by Reginald Kelly, former adviser on the British Columbia Indian affairs committee, who said in Victoria that allowances might be prepaid to allow families to buy houses.

"It's never been considered for the simple reason that the child must be alive to receive an allowance," a federal welfare administrator here said. "We can't say how long a child will live."

He added that under present legislation, family allowances can't be used as a guarantee for a loan.

Mobile Home Tax Paid by Farmers

Premier Bennett gave wholehearted support in the legislature Thursday to the idea of setting up more co-operatives for farmers in the province.

During debate on estimates of the agriculture department, he said he had been a director of the Okanagan apple co-operative.

Farmers should take the responsibility to form co-operatives to do away with the need for the middle man, he said.

Cyril Shelford (SC — Omineca) complained of the increasing price spread between the price paid to the farmer and that paid by the consumer.

In 1949, he said, the farmer received slightly more at Kamloops auction for beef than in 1965.

On an average the price in 1949 had been $17.45 a hundred pounds, and in 1965 it had been 18 cents less.

At the same time the retail price had increased from about 50 cents a pound for a roast in 1949, to about $1 a pound.

"The laws of supply and demand don't enter into it," he said. "Prices are strictly based upon what the traffic will bear."

Farmer Co-Ops Favored

Farmers are paying for the education of the children of mobile home dwellers, the legislature was told Thursday.

"The burden of taxes on farm land today is far greater than is necessary for the value of that land," Dean Smith (SC, North Peace River) said during debate on agricultural department estimates.

"In the field of education, it must be very griping to a farmer to have to pay a substantial amount in school tax, and then go into the city and see several hundred families in mobile homes who are having their children educated in schools he has to help pay for," he said.

These people, he was sure, would be willing to help pay for education.

Referring to the acquisition of Crown lands, he suggested block development of areas, so roads and services could be installed.

Crown land should be sold at a price closer to its worth, with a system for roads decided before land sale, he said.

CIA Subsidies Launched By Security Council

WASHINGTON (AP)—Central Intelligence Agency subsidies for private groups were initiated by the United States National Security Council and had been under continuing review by top federal officials, a White House report said Thursday.

The preliminary report was signed by State Undersecretary Nicholas Katzenbach, head of a three-man panel assigned by President Johnson to review relations between the CIA and private organizations. Press Secretary George Christian said he distributed the document to reporters at Johnson's direction.

'VITALLY IMPORTANT'

The committee was established after disclosure that the CIA had contributed heavily to projects of the National Student Association, including the sending of students to overseas meetings.

"It is vitally important," Katzenbach wrote, "that the current controversy over its (CIA) support of certain private organizations not be permitted to obscure the value, or impede the effectiveness, of competent and dedicated career officials serving this country."

EDMONTON (CP)—A former president of the National Federation of Canadian University Students said Thursday he was approached in 1961 by a Russian attache and by the RCMP.

Bruce Rawson of Edmonton, now a provincial solicitor, said the RCMP warned him the Russian "may be after some information." The Soviet embassy staff member later was expelled from Canada in connection with an incident involving an Ottawa civil servant.

Mr. Rawson said the Russian's visit was "an attempt to set up friendly relations with me and the federation." He asked no questions about student politics other than the aims and objects of NFCUS.

SURPRISED

A visit from an RCMP plainclothesman followed. The student was given a copy of the Gouzenko report on another Ottawa security case in 1946 and had "a friendly drink" with the investigator.

Mr. Rawson said he was surprised at recent public outcry about Canadian student leaders having been questioned by the RCMP.

"They're doing their job. When Soviet embassy personnel pay a visit to a leader, I would equally welcome the RCMP."

He was later invited to a Soviet embassy reception where he again met the attache—and the same plainclothesman.

Veterinary Controls Up-Dated

A bill to establish a new act respecting veterinary medicine and surgery was introduced in the B.C. legislature Thursday by Agriculture Minister Richter.

The minister said in a corridor interview the bill brings up to date regulations established under provincial statute 55 years ago.

'I Can Beat Any, All of Them'

Fulton Definitely After Tory Throne

By RON COLLISTER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Davie Fulton said Thursday that he can beat anyone in the field as he made a formal declaration of his candidacy for leader of the Tory party.

A week after George Hees, in shirt-sleeves and red suspenders, threw his hat into the ring, Mr. Fulton called a similar news conference.

A reporter asked him if he was, as some people thought, "A soft spoken intellectual," in contrast to at least one other candidate, presumably Mr. Hees.

HARD HITTER

"I'm a hard-hitting, fighting intellectual," Fulton replied.

"I intend to use my mind. I think the Canadian people expect their politicians to use the brains that God gave them."

Mr. Fulton was asked if he could beat Mr. Hees and Nova Scotia premier Robert Stanfield, who may be a candidate.

"I expect I can beat any and all of them," he replied.

"That's the way I am running and that's the campaign I intend to wage."

THREE POSTS

He would use his record to sell himself — a record covering seven elections in 22 years, plus three cabinet posts.

Mr. Fulton was asked if he could win despite the opposition of Tory leader John Diefenbaker.

"Yes, I think so," he replied. The delegates at the convention would make their own assessments of the candidates.

Mr. Diefenbaker, he said, and all the other leadership candidates should declare themselves soon, to clear the air and give the delegates time to reach a decision.

NO SURPRISES

"There should be no last minute surprises," he said.

The convention is to be held in Toronto Sept. 6-9. Mr. Fulton has urged that the time be changed, either earlier or later, to meet the problems of prairie farmers who will be harvesting at that time and parents of young children facing the problems of a new school year.

Mr. Fulton, 50, former justice minister and public works minister in the Diefenbaker cabinet, has been in the race since his return to federal politics in November, 1965.

But, he explained Thursday, he did not believe he was a formal candidate until after the convention date had been set. And that was the reason for calling a news conference.

NOT SURE

It was interpreted as suggesting that Mr. Fulton is not sure that Mr. Diefenbaker won't jump into the race at the last minute.

Besides Mr. Fulton, the other important candidates are George Hees and House leader Michael Starr. Others, including Dr. Hugh Horner, MP, of Alberta, are also running.

Mr. Diefenbaker has not shown his hand, but is not expected to enter the race.

ALL PARTS

Mr. Fulton said he hasn't been campaigning until the last 10 days, but he already has organizations in all parts of Canada.

He did not think that the Spence inquiry, which examined his conduct as justice minister, in the Gerda Munsinger case, was going to hurt him at all.

"The only people it hurt," he said, "were the Liberal government that initiated it, and, for a time at least, Parliament itself."

Fulton

He promised that his leadership campaign was going to be fought on the basis of policies and would ignore personalities and past differences.

Mr. Fulton said he did not think he was a "loser" in advance because he lost the 1956 federal leadership race and failed to bring the British Columbia Tories out of the woods.

"I'm not going in as a loser," he said.

Describing the policies he will try to sell in his campaign, he said:

● Foreign investment. Canadians must be encouraged, through incentives, to invest in Canada's growth. But they should not be asked to accept the lower standard of living that follows discrimination against foreign investment.

● Would he take the party back to "the right," to the traditional position that existed before Mr. Diefenbaker?

"We throw these words left and right around and they have so many interpretations. I am a Conservative — small "c" and large "C" — and I will lead the party along Conservative lines."

● Social legislation. "I think we have gone about as far as we should go for the time being . . . I have reservations about the extent to which we have gone."

● The bi-and-bi commission. "There is potential good here. But most of the good that can come out of it has already come, in focussing attention on the dialogue (between the two language groups).

"I think the danger lies in false expectations, that it's report will contain all the solutions."

Ceiling Just Joke

Act Would Legalize 'Real' Bank Rate

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

If, as Finance Minister Sharp suggests, the new Bank Act will put the interest rate ceiling at 7¼ per cent for the rest of the year, he will be merely legalizing what the majority of banks have been doing indirectly for some time.

As most bank borrowers know, the bank ceiling of 6 per cent since tight money took hold last summer has been nothing short of a joke.

Some customers with prime records have been getting away with the 6 per cent rate, but most have had to pay a service charge of some sort, or have had to maintain 10 per cent of their loan in a non-interest bearing current account.

STATUS QUO

The various banks have been getting round the ceiling in different ways, and they have managed with their hidden charges to increase the true rate to round about 7¼ per cent, or just what Finance Minister Sharp believes the rate should be for the rest of this year.

In other words the status quo will be legalized.

IT PAID TO WAIT

It paid the City of Victoria to hold off its new financing requirements from last fall. By waiting, as the city's comptroller-treasurer, James Bramley, advised, the city had saved $11,800 in debenture discount on a loan of $511,800.

On Oct. 27, 1966, when tight money was really tight, the best tender was one of 94.639 yielding 6.71 per cent.

When new tenders were opened Thursday, the best bid was 99.95 yielding 6.39 per cent.

The low tender was submitted by a syndicate composed of Wood Gundy, Dominion Securities and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

The bid was accepted by council.

WELDWOOD PROFIT DOWN

Because it is more dependent upon the house construction industry than its major rivals in the forest industry field, Weldwood of Canada Ltd., fared rather worse than average in 1966.

On a calendar year computation Weldwood in 1966 made a net profit of $2,303,262 (79 cents) against $3,841,377 ($1.26) in 1965.

However, the company has changed its fiscal year from April 30 to December 31, and the latest statement covers only an eight month period. In this period Weldwood's net was $1,230,991 (41 cents) from sales of $70,614,454.

Weldwood, which now comprises the old Western Plywood and Canadian Collieries companies of British Columbia, says prices for softwood plywood and lumber were severely depressed during latter part of 1966, while higher wages and strikes in other industries affected profits.

John Bene, president, says a significant improvement in housing starts is welcome news to a company so heavily orientated towards supplying of building products.

Opposition on Bugging:

Stop Probe But Start Legislation

Both Liberals and New Democrats demanded Thursday that the royal commission on electronic eavesdropping be stopped, and legislation on "bugging" be brought in.

A statement from the Liberal caucus cited advertisements in Vancouver and Victoria telephone directories as evidence that government licensed and bonded agencies are using devices for "listening and recording" and for detecting "telephone taps and room bugs."

MAJOR CONCERN

If the government continues the commission, licences of private detectives advertising the use of "bugging" devices should be suspended, the caucus said.

The attorney-general had not been concerned with "bugging" even when it was discovered in Victoria city police station, it said, but the question had become of major concern when two unions became involved.

The irresistible conclusion, it said, was that the government had become concerned only when it saw that a political advantage could be derived.

SHOULD WITHDRAW

Earlier, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan attacked the inquiry.

"The attorney-general should immediately withdraw the order-in-council setting up this inquiry and bring legislation into this session to outlaw electronic eavesdropping" he said.

"That, after all, was the sole purpose of the inquiry and nothing else.

"If there are inter-union problems that require investigating, they should be referred immediately to the select standing committee on labor in this present legislative session," he said.

Fewer Fires, Forests Boomed

A contributing factor in B.C.'s record forest production last year was the relatively quiet fire season, according to the annual report of the B.C Forest Service tabled in the legislature Thursday.

The total of 1,967 fires recorded was well beow the 10-year average of 2,117, and fire suppression costs in 1966 averaged $886 per fire compared to $2,041 the previous year.

Fire-fighting costs ran to $1,028,100 during the year, including $700,400 which was paid by the Forest Service, stated the report tabled by Resources Minister Williston.

The 54,788 acres of forest cover burned were only 12 per cent of the 10-year average of 438,000 acres, while the damage to forest cover was $757,000, compared to the 10-year average of $3,252,637.

Production value rose to $1,037,000,000 to set an all-time record for B.C., despite a slump in the lumber market during the fourth quarter.

Timber scale for the year was 1,602,437,488 cubic feet, compared to 1,533,112,794 cubic feet in 1966—an increase of 4½ per cent, and the highest scale ever recorded in the history of the province.

Forest service crews made a record collection of 35,000 bushels of cones for reforestation purposes, which is expected to provide a good foundation for the increasing planting program.

Nursery facilities were expanded in all locations and more than 19,000,000 trees were planted by agencies during the year. The planting of Crown lands was the most extensive since 1954, the report stated.

All merchantable timber in the Peace River flood basin, except in the northerly and inaccessible portion, has been sold under timber sale contract.

A total of 22,399,000 cubic feet was scaled in the Mica dam area and the total cut now stands at 38,341,160 cubic feet. A total of 2,383,180 cubic feet had been scaled in Duncan dam flood area by the end of the year and in the High Arrow flood basin the year's scale total was 1,097,482 cubic feet.

Starling–Mynah Trade Mooted

B.C. should trade its starlings to Australia in exchange for that country's mynah birds, says Agriculture Minister Richter.

He was replying, tongue in cheek, to a suggestion in the legislature from Herb Capozzi (SC, Vancouver Centre) that the government should allot some money for starling control.

Mr. Capozzi told the House the birds feed in the Fraser Valley and fly into Vancouver to sleep, and that Vancouverites have a problem of keeping their buildings clean.

Mr. Richter admitted that starlings are a problem. They migrated to the West Coast and "it looks like this is where they are going to roost" because it's too far for the birds to fly to the Orient.

"If you catch them, they make awfully good pie, almost as good as apple pie from the Okanagan," the minister said.

These birds are considered a delicacy in some parts of the world and, as a matter of fact, Australia would like to have them and trade us their mynah birds, he told the House.

Hopes Still Alive

Armstrong Loses Again, Strikes Back

Jim Armstrong's eager Esquimalt foursome hit another roadblock Thursday in its bid to bring B.C. a schoolboy curling championship, but bounced back to keep its national title hopes alive.

After dropping a heartbreaking 6-5 squeaker to Manitoba in the morning, Armstrong, with yeoman help from lead Dave Vyner, second Torrey Gillot and third Gord Paterson, stormed back. Saskatchewan went down 7-6 and luckless New Brunswick was bombed 18-3.

While the B.C. rink was pursuing its varied fortunes, the two pacesetters in the championship scramble, Alberta and Nova Scotia, were continuing their climb toward the title.

	W	L
Alberta	7	1
Nova Scotia	7	1
Manitoba	7	2
Ontario	6	2
British Columbia	6	3
Saskatchewan	4	4
Northern Ontario	3	5
Pr. Edward Island	2	6
New Brunswick	2	6
Quebec	1	6
Newfoundland	0	8

ALBERTA SLOWED

Alberta was slowed briefly when skip Stan Trout absorbed his first loss, an 8-7 defeat at the hands of Manitoba's Brian Clapham.

However, on the day Trout continued to point toward the championship with easy victories over Northern Ontario, 12-2; and Saskatchewan, 9-3.

Meanwhile the real dark-horse of the tournament, Nova Scotia, stuck right with Alberta with a trio of wins, downing Ontario 9-4, Quebec, 10-5 and Prince Edward Island, 10-4.

TOUGH COMPANY

Heading into yesterday's play, Armstrong and his rink knew they were in tough company in facing Manitoba's Brian Clapman and Ron Jacques of Saskatchewan.

And they weren't long in learning just how tough, as Clapham struck fast against the slow-starting B.C. squad, to count a stunning three in the first end of the morning opener.

Missed shots by the Armstrong men were the key to Manitoba's fast get-away. With the Esquimalt rink blowing a trio of possible take-outs, Clapham wasted little time cashing in.

SPARKLING DRAWS

However, the B.C. youngsters were far from coming completely unstuck. In the second, Armstrong got a pair of sparkling draws to the four-foot from second Gillot and added two of his own to move right back into the game at 3-2.

And briefly from there things got even better as it came Clapham's turn to take his lumps.

In both the third and fourth ends, the Manitoba skip personally let Armstrong's charges steal single counters and the lead.

TWO MISSES

On the third, Clapham's faux-pas was a missed take-out, while in the fourth he pulled up light on a draw that would have cut B.C. out.

Finally in the fifth, however, Manitoba managed to make its last-rock advantage pay off to knot the count at 4-4.

From there Armstrong elected to blank both the sixth and seventh, but the strategy back-fired in the eighth when Clapham again grabbed a single and the edge once again.

Disaster struck for the B.C. rink in the ninth when a pair of missed take-outs let Clapham in for another singleton and 6-4 lead.

Against Saskatchewan's Ron Jacques, the action was equally tense through eight ends as the two rinks battled to a 4-4 sawoff.

TURN IT ON

Then B.C. turned it on, with third Paterson leading the way. Clearly out to redeem himself for his costly misses against Manitoba, Paterson did just that.

On his first shot the B.C. third laid a perfect draw to the 8-foot and with Manitoba third Arnie Tiefenbach missing heavy, he repeated with another fine draw to the other side of the house.

From there it took only a badly laid freeze by Jacques to set Armstrong up for an easy take-out and three-rock payoff that wrapped up the game.

NO CONTEST

B.C.'s final clash with New Brunswick was strictly no-contest and a definite coast-in after Armstrong hit for a stunning four in the opening end.

With the two-out-of-three result on the day B.C. scrambled to a fourth-place tie with Ontario with a 6-2 record.

Nova Scotia and Alberta shared the lead, with Manitoba second.

TERRIFIC SPIRITS

"The boys are all in terrific spirits and are heading into today's play pointing for an upset of Nova Scotia in the morning.

"And from there, of course, we will still have to by-pass Ontario and spare a little mental power to willing Nova Scotia to a win over Alberta.

"Naturally," Garraway went on with a chuckle, "we realize there are quite a few ifs involved in such an outcome, but it could happen and this whole thing wind up in a great big lovely playoff snarl."

Blade Win Sets Back City Leafs

Los Angeles Blades handed Seattle Totems a 5-0 Western Hockey League bombing in Los Angeles Thursday night to leapfrog into fourth place and drop Victoria's Maple Leafs into sixth.

With Dave Kelly chalking up his first shutout of the season, the Blades passed both the Leafs and Oakland Seals and moved into the final playoff berth in the league.

Norm Johnson opened the scoring for Los Angeles in the first period, Dick Meissner made it 2-0 in the second, and Bill Orban, Murray Hall and Leo LaBine wrapped it up.

Beware! Red Hands Off Old Sandy

By JIM MURRAY

I don't know what it is about pitchers, but the minute they make the Hall of Fame they start looking around to fill it with their cronies, meanwhile trying to throw salt in the eyes of other guys who might beat them out of a turn on the mound.

You will recall, when the great Bobby Feller made it (on the first go-round), he promptly suggested they make room for George Blaeholder. At the same time, he strongly implied that if, say, Whitey Ford made it, he should bring a relief pitcher along with him to finish out the last two of every nine innings, since that was the way Whitey had won his way in — pitching 7-9ths of every game.

Well, baseball rapped itself along the side of the head to be sure it was hearing that one correctly, because George Blaeholder's lifetime statistics included a won-loss record of 104-125. "Never mind," said Feller, "he invented the slider, didn't he?"

Now, along comes Charles Rufus (Red) Ruffing, a considerable pitcher, indeed. Red's lifetime record is pretty impressive: won 273; lost 225.

Ruffing Sets Standard

But, now, Red wants to salt the lineup, too. Red doesn't wont to see anybody be in Cooperstown who didn't win 200 games on the mound, or bat a lifetime .300 in the batter's box. Anyone who stayed up there 20 years automatically makes it even if he only picked up howls for the last 19 of them.

Well, I can understand Red's anxiety to have plenty of .300 hitters along. That is how he made the Hall of Fame in the first place. Red, you see, pitched for the New York Yankees — when they WERE the New York Yankees. I mean that lineup had Ruth, Gehrig, Dickey, DiMaggio, Lazzeri, Rolfe, Crosetti and Combs. You could have pitched blindfolded. Those guys won world series games 18-4. Look it up.

I don't blame Red. He doesn't want to be surrounded with Maury Wills, John Kennedy, Ducky Schofield — more banjoes than the Christy Minstrels. Red doesn't want to be in a lineup where, like Don Drysdale, he's the best hitter in it (and Red was the second best hitting pitcher that lived next to Babe Ruth).

Red wants those home-runs nay, NEEDS those home-runs. You see, when Red pitched on a team of ordinary mortals — the Boston Red Sox of 1924-1930 — his stats were decidedly sub-Cooperstown, to say the least. He won 10 and lost 25 in 1928. He won 9 and lost 22 in 1929. He NEVER had a winning year with the Sox. His lifetime was 39 won, 96 lost.

In Semi-Retirement

You can see where the Yankees were semi-retirement for him. The manager just handed Red the ball and said, "Keep it under 10 runs." Ruffing once won a world series game, 12-6. Went all the way.

Sandy Koufax only won 165 games, 108 fewer than Ruffing. However, he lost 138 fewer.

Ruffing's lifetime earned-run-average was just under four per game. In 1925 it was a robust 5.02 runs per game. That can hardly be attributed to a weak team behind him. Even in his great years with the Yankees, he posted marks like 3.94 and 3.85. But that can be excused on the plea that you don't have to bear down with a 10-run lead.

Koufax' 1966 ERA was 1.73. He had figures of 1.88 and 1.74 in other years. He struck out more in a month than Ruffing did in a year.

I do not quarrel with Red's right to be in the Hall of Fame. I quarrel with his right to put banana peels in the path of a guy who allowed 1,754 hits in 2,325 innings — vs. Ruffing's 4,342 hits in 4,294 innings, and a guy who leads him 4-0 in no-hit games. So, back in that glass case, Red! You already got Ruth, Gehrig, Dickey, DiMag with you. Make way for a guy who did it with Don Zimmer, Dick Gray, Nate Oliver, Joe Pignatano and Norm Sherry.

A rookie and a B.C. all-star lead the top-rated Victoria high school basketball teams in the chase for the Colonist Cup trophy in the boys' Island Championships which start tonight at University of Victoria gymnasium.

Ollie Moilanen, one of the key players in Victoria High Totems' capture of the provincial championship, is expected to carry most of the Totem scoring load tonight and Saturday as Victoria High tries for one of the three provincial playoff berths at stake.

BALANCED ATTACK

Oak Bay has one of the best balanced attacks in the tournament but receives much of its spark from guard Don Burrows.

Burrows is usually near the top of the scoring in each game and could easily lead the Bays to the championship, as his brother Bob did two years ago, with a steady series.

OPENING ROUND

Oak Bay plays Courtenay at 8:20 and Totems meet Cowichan at 9:45 in opening round games tonight.

Leafs Sitting All Alone In Third Slot

A string of three second-period goals helped the Toronto Maple Leafs break a two-year drought at Olympia Stadium with a 4-2 National Hockey League victory over Detroit Thursday night.

Mike Walton, Ron Ellis and Frank Mahovlich scored within a span of two minutes and 49 seconds late in the second period to provide the Leafs with their first win in Detroit since March 28, 1965.

The loss further dimmed Detroit's already slim chances of getting into the Stanley Cup playoffs. Detroit now trails Toronto by six points and has already played two more games than the Leafs.

JINX HOLDERS

In Montreal, Canadiens were unable to break the jinx of the Boston Bruins as the two teams battled to a 2-2 tie.

The last-place Bruins who play their best hockey in the Montreal Forum have run up the amazing string of five consecutive games without a loss.

The only time the Canadiens beat the Bruins was in the season opener back on Oct. 22. Oddly enough the Habs have won their last three games in a row in Boston. The Bruins have registered two ties and three wins in their last five visits to Montreal.

The tie pushed Montreal down to fourth place in the NHL standings. Leafs moved into third place one point ahead of Montreal.

BIG ATTACK

Larry Hillman scored the first Toronto goal early in the first period, but the Wings put on a scorching shooting attack through most of the first two periods to gain a 2-1 lead.

Gordie Howe scored his 19th goal of the year to tie the game, and Alex Delvecchio put the Wings ahead at 13:58 of the second period.

The Leafs waited less than three minutes after Delvecchio's goal to spring to life. Walton ignited the scoring outburst with a sizzling shot past Roger Crozier in a two-on-one break.

PERFECT SETUP

Walton started Ellis toward his goal only 18 seconds later with a pass to Mahovlich, who in turn hit Ellis on a perfect setup at the corner of the Detroit cage. Mahovlich scored the clincher at 19:05 while the Wings were shorthanded.

Aging goalie Terry Sawchuk was the decisive factor in the game. The Wings blistered Sawchuk with a total of 40 shots on goal. The 28 which came in the first two periods were practically all dangerous scoring shots, but only two of them got past the veteran netminder.

The victory was the fourth against five losses and two ties against Detroit in this season's series. During the two-year winless streak which the Leafs broke, they had lost nine games and tied three in Detroit, while managing to break even with the Wings at the Gardens.

TWO FOR BUCYK

Johnny Bucyk scored twice for Boston and was credited with the goal that tied the game. Bucyk, who now has 16 goals this season, scored in the second period when his backhand went in off the skate of Jacques Laperriere. Bucyk's first period goal came on a power play as he converted a perfect pass from Murray Oliver at the blue line.

Johnny Ferguson opened the scoring in the first period. Ralph Backstrom was the other Montreal scorer as he banged in the puck after several tries in the second period.

TEAMS TIGHTEN

Both teams tightened up in the third period. Bob Dillabough had the best chance as he broke in all alone on Montreal's rookie netminder Rogatien Vachon, but hit the goal post. Vachon made a total of 21 saves in all, while Bernie Parent who received great support from all-star defenceman Bobby Orr turned aside 28 shots in the Boston net.

Canadiens' Bob Rousseau was ejected from the game by referee Art Skov after allegedly elbowing the official. He now stands a good chance of being suspended and will have to face a formal hearing by league president Clarence Campbell.

District Sports Council Backs Saanich Project

Greater Victoria Sports Council Thursday unanimously approved the proposed new recreational facilities in Saanich at the annual meeting at the YMCA.

Saanich councillor Ed Lum outlined the development plans to the meeting and was assured of the sports council's support for the up-coming bylaw in March.

BACKING SET

Centennial committee co-ordinator Jerry Gosley urged the various sports bodies to plan centennial events for junior players on July 1, and noted that $1,000 has been put aside by the committee for such projects.

City parks board chairman Herb Warren announced that Royal Athletic Park is expected to be ready by May 1, but difficulties with the lighting specifications may delay the installation of the lights until late fall.

ONE ACTIVITY

Sports council representative on the centennial stadium committee reported that the only activity scheduled before 1968 is the military tattoo which will take place on a temporary surface, probably with a tar base.

In order to cut down costs, a steel-framed wooden roof is replacing the original concrete proposal and a chain-link fence with shrubs planted on the inside will block out the exposed areas around the stadium.

DIRECTORS NAMED

Elected directors for two-year terms were Bert Richman, Saanich parks administrator, and Lou Parker, president of the Juvenile Soccer Association.

Officers with one year left in two-year terms are president Doug Fletcher, vice-president Gary Taylor, and directors Gar Taylor, Busher Jackson and Art Burgess.

A secretary to replace Bob Maddocks will be appointed by the executive.

Island Skiing To Be Good

No new snow has fallen at Forbidden Plateau or Green Mountain this week but both areas report good skiing conditions with an excellent corn snow surface at the Plateau.

Temperature at both areas is 30 degrees. All facilities are in operation and the roads are cleared.

Speaking Briefly

Mudcat Goes a Little Hairy on Principle with Twins

Jim (Mudcat) Grant is going a little hairy on a matter of principle and may wind up a holdout with the Minnesota Twins for the second year in a row.

Grant, who last year demanded a $50,00 contract and eventually signed for considerably less after a lengthy layoff, has another joker up his sleeve.

He's bucking to be the first modern major leaguer to wear a beard while playing ball in the regular season.

In making his hirsute threat to retain his mandarin-type Van Dyke, Grant will be following an abortive precedent set by a one-time Dodger, zany Frenchy Bordagaray.

Bordagaray's experience augurs ill for Mudcat however, as Frenchy got only as far as a moustache in spring training and then capitulated.

ON THE BASEBALL front in Toronto, the hard-pressed Maple Leafs got a lease on life when they were granted a further tax concession. Board of Control voted 3-2 to grant the club a tax exemption for 1967. With the club already two years in arrears on its taxes, the grant was made conditional on the Leafs paying its 1965 bill of $31,000 by July 1. Leaf president Bob Hunter said the immediate future "looks encouraging now."

CASSIUS CLAY now is planning to become a farmer when he retires from the ring. Clay, who began training for his March 22 title defence against Zora Folley in New York, told of his intention of buying three farms around the U.S., commented "there ain't nothing like farming. You can always eat."

More than $1,000 worth of prizes will be up for grabs Saturday and Sunday in the Courtenay Fish and Game Club's mammoth steelhead derby which will take in all rivers north of, and including, the Big Qualicum River. The derby is open to all Vancouver Islanders for a $3 entrance fee, $1 for juniors.

Entry tickets are available from several sporting goods stores in the Victoria area and at other places throughout the length of the Island until 6 p.m. today. After that they may be obtained at the federal fisheries station at the Big Qualicum River and at the Courtenay tourist bureau, which will be the official weigh-in station, with entries closing 4 p.m. Sunday.

The fishermen in the know are predicting the biggest fish will come from the Salmon River at Sayward where Bill Clark took a 20.15 pounder Sunday and steelhead guide Len Francis took another better than 20-pounds the same day.

At the time of writing, pretty well all rivers are low and it appears as if some critical fishing will be needed to catch steelhead this weekend . . . light leaders, stalking approach to river fishing spots, and careful casting. The rivers are slow and clear and dropping.

* * *

This year it seems incongruous to say rain is needed, but that was the case Thursday morning, and some rain was forecast.

Without a substantial bit of rain the Big Qualicum, with its controlled flow, would seem one of the better bets for steelhead, but not for the big contest-winning fish.

Last week on the Big Qualicum, 160 anglers fished 605 hours for three trout, 35 steelhead above the counting fence and 19 below, for the best week of steelheading this season. To date 920 anglers have fished 3,174 hours this season for 16 trout, 129 steelhead above fence and 59 below. Some 573 steelhead have been counted over the fence.

Campbell River is another river with a more or less controlled flow and should be a good bet this weekend.

First prize for the heaviest fish in the Courtenay derby will be a $160 shotgun plus other merchandise to a $200 value.

There will be prizes for the three heaviest fish, for the woman with the heaviest fish, for the junior with the heaviest fish, the first fish weighed in, the first limit, the smallest steelhead four pounds or heavier, three hidden weight prizes and some draw prizes.

Bucky Kennett reports the Cowichan in nice condition, getting better and giving up steelhead and cutthroat trout.

The cutthroat trout are starting to appear in fair numbers in many of the rivers, including the Puntledge, Tsolum, Sarita.

Trout fishing in the lakes is improving and will likely be a hot-one-day, poor-the-next proposition for the next month or two, according to the weather. Little lakes in Sayward area are producing well. Upper Campbell and Buttle Narrows were reported fair last weekend. Council and Wolf Lakes are reported fair and trout were rising on Fairy last weekend.

* * *

Last weekend saw blueback fishing come alive in the lower Island waters.

Fisheries inspector Harry Grainger reported "the biggest concentration of grilse I have seen" off Oak Bay and for some distance off Discovery at the weekend. There are blues off Coal Island, blues up to three pounds and chinooks on the outside of Sydney Island, and chinooks and jacksprings, but no bluebacks off Brotchie Ledge-Esquimalt waters, but they may have moved around by this weekend. Owen Lohr found Dusk Island in Sidney area productive on green and red Tomick plugs.

Finlayson Arm has some good fishing at last. The Lohr brothers have been hitting chinooks in Goldstream Island area and blues have been good in the Narrows and in an area between Goldstream Island along the shore to Chesterfield Rock.

Jim Gilbert has been finding good fishing for three to 11-pound chinooks in Tod Inlet to Willis Point and even hooked and landed a duck or two which were feeding on the spawning herring and minnows. The bite has been in the early morning to about 10 a.m., and some have been taken to 18 pounds. Bamberton shore and Indian Bay are giving up chinooks to eight pounds and McKenzie Bay and White Lady waters are also producing chinooks. The blues are moving about and small spoons and two ounces seems best combination, although when they are showing bucktails are working well.

Tent Island-Crofton waters are alive with bluebacks and good-sized springs are being taken in Cowichan Bay and Sansum Narrows.

Monday is the night of the big push for a two-mile net free corridor in Juan de Fuca Strait and the lower east coast of Vancouver Island. The Amalgamated Conservation Society meets at 7:30 p.m. in the Ingraham Hotel with deputy fisheries minister A. W. H. Needler and other federal fisheries officials. It will be a meeting for ACS members and invited spokesmen only, and ACS members plan to give no quarter in their demands for better fishing for lower Vancouver Island sports fishermen.

McEachern Picked After Davey Quits

MONTREAL (CP) — Allan McEachern of Vancouver, incoming president of the Canadian Football League, took over as CFL commissioner Thursday night—a position he will hold without salary until a successor can be found for Senator Keith Davey.

The move came eight hours after Senator Davey ended a stormy 54 days in office with his resignation when he failed to win a vote of confidence from league owners.

SEVEN WEEKS

The commissioner served little more than seven weeks of a three-year contract in the $25,000-a-year office.

Ted Workman, outgoing CFL president, said the appointment of McEachern was unanimous and came during a closed executive meeting.

"My tenure of office lasts only so long as it takes to find a suitable commissioner," McEachern said.

SWIFT MOVE

Senator Davey's resignation came swiftly.

Denied a vote of confidence by the owners of the nine league teams, he walked out of the annual CFL meeting, handed copies of his annual report to sports writers and left.

Allan McEachern of Vancouver, incoming CFL president, said the commissioner asked for a vote of confidence and this was moved by Toronto Argonauts, in the past one of the most severe critics of the senator's outspokenness.

NO CONFIDENCE

"No club had enough confidence in the commissioner to second the motion."

Because the commissioner resigned—"and he was not asked to resign, he was not fired"—he will not receive any money under the alimony clause in his contract, McEachern said.

CRITICISM CITED

Senator Davey's report, which contained nothing of an internal confidential nature recognized that criticism had been levelled at him during his brief term in office.

It ended:

"If I am not sustained I feel that in fairness to my position I ought to release this statement to the press. For this reason, I have purposefully excluded matters of a confidential nature which can be dealt with elsewhere on the agenda."

GUIDELINES SET

League officials later disclosed the guidelines imposed upon the senator when he took over the CFL reins.

They required him to formulate policies and plans "for the benefit of football in general and the league in particular, upon his own initiative or under direction of the executive committee."

They made him responsible for all phases of player-club relationships and gave him supervision over the selection, training and discipline of game officials "including statisticians, timekeepers and the public address men, both on and off the field."

The senator's report listed goals he referred to as "a fan's bill of rights" and included:

● Communication with fans: Improvement of stadium facilities, public address system and crowd control. "Every league game should have a half-time show which sparkles."

● Standardization: A one-league structure, retaining the East-West rivalry of two divisions. "Each team must have the same number of teams playing the same number of games."

● Television: "Every game should be available in its entirety in the home as well as the away market." The blackout system "plays into the hands of cable operators."

● The game: "We should encourage a more offensive brand of Canadian football."

● Awards: "... We should also institute an official Canadian Football League all-star team, with some kind of cash recognition by the league to the chosen players. The Schenley Awards must be replaced by league awards."

● Players' association: "The league should not only recognize the new players' association, but make membership therein mandatory for all players in the league. The proposed CFL pension plan should become a reality in time for the 1967 season.

Lion-Eskimo Exhibition Won't Be Staged Here

Plans for B.C. Lions to play a pre-season exhibition game here against Edmonton Eskimos appear to have fallen through.

Lions, who are still negotiating for the use of facilities at Royal Roads for their training camp, were willing to arrange a game between the two Western Football Conference clubs if they could find a sponsor.

It would have been held at Royal Athletic Park in mid-July if arrangements could have been completed.

However, two potential sponsors, the Victoria Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, are unable to sponsor the game and unless there are unexpected developments in the near future the game likely will be played in Vancouver's Empire Stadium.

B.C.'s mental health services are not competitive with other mental health services across Canada, and working conditions are so intolerable that the limited staff is given a greater work load than it can cope with, the Liberal member told the House.

These problems "will only precipitate a chain reaction which can cripple all our mental health services," he added.

Health Minister Black replied that he had already advised the House that there were problems in the health department.

'NOT GONE'

"These problems have not gone away, anywhere," he added.

"I did not personally ask these people to resign. They were given notices by the administration," the minister said, and the government is "trying to fill as quickly as we can those vacancies."

Ray Parkinson (NDP — Vancouver Burrard) said, "You cannot operate the mental health service without the entire team. These are the people who actually treat patients ... and hundreds of nurses and dozens of psychiatrists depend on the psychologists.

'RETURN TO SANITY'

"Surely we can return to sanity, at least among the staff, and keep these services going," he said, asking for reassurance from the minister that "every effort will be made to retain this staff."

Mr. Black then said he would try to arrange a meeting with the psychologists, and the House moved on to the estimates for the department of agriculture.

Taxes

at the same time, I don't like to see excessive profit made without due compensation toward the economy of the country."

Conservative leadership candidate Davie Fulton said he wanted to reserve any detailed comment because there were various forms of capital gains tax.

But he would look "with a great deal of suspicion and scrutiny" at any suggested capital gains tax.

KEEP BENEFITS

"Canadians, he said, should be encouraged to take part in risk enterprises, and not have the benefits taken away from them.

According to reports, the commission's finding contain a drastic shock.

- The excise tax and the sales tax may be extended.
- There may be a new system for taxing families.
- The division of taxing powers between the federal and provincial governments will be a key area for new action.
- The problems of municipalities in raising money for their growth is sure to be another. And real estate taxes.

IDEAL SYSTEM

The commission's chairman is Kenneth Carter, a former chairman of the board of governors of the Canadian Tax Foundation.

It was put to work by the former Diefenbaker government in 1962, held 99 days of hearings across the country and heard 700 witnesses.

OTHERS EXAMINED

Over 320 briefs were presented and at one point, 150 people were working for the commission, researching.

Along the way, tax systems in the U.S., Sweden, Italy, Israel and other countries were examined.

"Effective today, American Motors announces a policy change that makes it possible for 100,000 Canadian families to get the kind of car they really need, at the price they want to pay."

Earl K. Brownridge, President, American Motors (Canada) Limited

During the last few years, a major gap has developed in the automobile market. A gap between the price of imported cars and domestic compacts. It is a gap that no North American car is filling. And it gets wider every year. Because of this price gap, about 100,000 Canadian families each year may have to buy an imported car.

North American built compact cars are really what these families need and want. These cars have the comfort, performance, room, reliability and safety features required for our conditions. But the price of the domestic compact has risen in the past few years; risen to the point where it is beyond what a great many families want to spend for transportation.

We at American Motors believe that it is time to close this gap. It is time to give those 100,000 Canadian families the kind of car they really want to have, at the price they want to pay: a Canadian-built compact at a competitive price.

How are we going to do it?

We have decided that future changes to the Rambler American (the original compact car) will be limited to genuine improvements; essential changes that will improve the safety and reliability of these cars. There will be no annual face-lifts. No annual model changes. No changes for the sake of change alone. We can do it and still provide a technically up-to-date car because the American has been continuously improved since its introduction 10 years ago. This year we added a completely new line of Six and V-8 engines. Now, we have reached the point where we consider an annual model change is unnecessary for cars designed as basic transportation.

Annual model changes cost the auto industry and you millions of dollars each year. This major policy decision means that those millions can be turned into savings, which we are passing on to you, right now! Effective today, the list price of all Rambler American models is reduced as follows:

	Series & model	Old Price	New Price	Saving
220	2-door sedan	$2494	$2272	$222
	4-door sedan	2566	2382	184
	4-door station wagon	2871	2693	178
440	2-door sedan	$2627	$2446	$181
	4-door sedan	2699	2536	163
	4-door station wagon	3009	2860	149
	2-door hardtop	2722	2582	140
Rogue	2-door hardtop	$2913	$2767	$146
	2-door convertible	3130	2977	153

Make no mistake about this: these are not stripped down cars. They are exactly the same as models built prior to this policy decision. The complete range of Rambler American body styles, options, engines, colors and accessories is still available. All that we have trimmed away is the waste so inherent to the annual face-lifting game.

What does all this mean to present owners of Rambler Americans? Simply this: higher resale values due to stabilized styling and lower parts cost.

If you are considering the purchase of either an imported car or a domestic compact, I urge you to examine the chart below very carefully. See for yourself how the Rambler American fills the gap to give you the kind of car your family really needs at the price you want to pay.

Here's why we say that dollar for dollar, Rambler American is now the best automotive value in the world.

Rambler American Rogue

This new policy for the Rambler American completes the repositioning of American Motors cars that began with the introduction of the full-size 1967 Ambassador and the intermediate-size Rebel. We now offer a complete selection of cars in every size and price category to meet the needs of every new car buyer. But even beyond these cars that are a reality today, we are looking ahead and designing cars that are radical in concept, imaginative in design and operation. Cars that will set the pace in the automotive world in the challenging years ahead. The role of "the innovator" is a familiar one to us—after all, we did pioneer the whole idea of the compact car—and we are looking forward to being "the innovator" again in the very near future. We promise you exciting news from American Motors. This is only the beginning.

Victoria Woman Fails in Bid For Damages

Mr. Justice John G. Gould has dismissed the damage claim of a Victoria woman who was injured when a 32-ounce jar of mayonnaise fell from a shopping cart and cut her foot.

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Angeline Rossiter sued Canada Safeway Ltd., alleging the jar fell from the cart because of a broken flap in the upper basket.

Mr. Justice Gould found that Mrs. Rossiter, when she was shopping Aug. 18, 1965, placed the jar within inches of a leg hole meant for small children seated in the upper basket.

★ ★ ★

He said that no shopper using "reasonable care" should place a heavy purchase in the upper basket. He said there was a red flap in the upper basket which could be used to either cover up the leg holes or form a seat for a small child.

Incorrect Tax Slips Expensive

Incorrect T-4 income tax slips can deprive employees of possible benefits under the Canada Pension Plan, according to Duncan Tolson, Victoria District Taxation Public Information Officer.

He said Wednesday some employers are not filling in the tax slips correctly to show earnings, tax deductions and pension plan contributions.

"It is particularly important," said Mr. Tolson, "for employers to record correct Social Security numbers. This is the key to benefits under the plan."

What's Endgame About?

Acting Seemed Excellent

By BILL THOMAS

If only I knew what Endgame was all about, it might be possible to assess the quality of the Phoenix Theatre's production of Samuel Beckett's play.

The acting seemed excellent. Tony Nicholson was rigid and wooden as Clov. He must be in remarkable physical condition to pull himself up and down the galvanized pipes that are a dominant feature of the Frederick Edell set.

Dennis Brown plays Hamm, who appears to be the central character. He has probably the strongest role in the play and acquits himself admirably.

For my part, it was the parents of Hamm, who spend their lives in delightful senility popping up and down in a pair of matched garbage cans, who steal the show.

The old man, Nagg, is played by Michael Meicklejohn, and a very good job he does. He munches on a dog biscuit and cackles.

JUDGE FOR SELF

His aged wife, Nell, is played to perfection by Barbara Dunn. She does not get the lion's share of the lines, but she adds to the comic pathos of the play in no small part.

Frederick Edell has directed this difficult play, but it's hard to say if he has done a good or bad job, with what must be among the most problematical 90 minutes in show business.

If anyone explains this play to me, I will try to make a more explicit assessment of its qualities.

Possibly the reader may prefer to make his own judgment. Endgame will run to March 4.

Marriage Act For Royalty To Remain

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Wilson said in the Commons he sees no need for amending or repealing the Royal Marriages Act of 1772.

He was replying to a Labor member who said the act is an "antiquated survival" likely to place the Crown in the embarrassing position of deciding whether to grant permission for marriage to someone a long way down the line of succession.

Surcharge Threat Cut Down

VANCOUVER (CP) — Port manager B. D. L. Johnson said Thursday a threatened 15 per cent surcharge on ocean freight shipments to Vancouver from San Francisco has been cancelled by the Trans-Pacific Freight Conference of Hong Kong.

The only threatened surcharge on ocean freight to Vancouver still pending is one by the Trans-Pacific Freight Conference of Tokyo, with the effective date set as March 17.

Scenes Censored from Movie Offered Patrons in Booklets

LONDON (Reuters) — British moviegoers will be given booklets with pictures and dialogue from sex scenes cut from a movie version of James Joyce's novel Ulysses.

American director Joseph Strick said Tuesday night the British board of film censors cut two sequences from his film scheduled to open in Britain and the U.S. in March.

They were the final scene of love-making by Molly Bloom, the hero's wife, and a sequence of key-hole voyeurism by the hero, Leopold Bloom.

Strick said, "This is the only country in the world where I have been forced to make cuts."

The 42 - year - old moviemaker said he would have booklets prepared to be distributed to moviegoers with the texts and pictures of the censored scenes.

It was not certain whether British authorities would allow the booklets to be distributed, although this technique has been used before in Britain with censored plays.

Baby Bars Church Wedding

* * *

PLYMOUTH, England — Susan Skinner, 17, and Colin Shea, 20, are going to have a civil wedding because an Anglican vicar won't marry them with their 13-month-old baby present.

"We are being forced into having a register office wedding because the vicar is taking this Victorian attitude," said Susan.

"We definitley want her to be present when we get married," they said.

Rev. Charles Sigismund de Cerjat, vicar of Eggbuckland parish church, said "taking a baby to the wedding would amount to blatantly demonstrating what we accept as sinful."

"There is also the baby to consider," he added. "She is almost bound to be photographed, and people would ask her in later life what she was doing at her parents' wedding."

* * *

SAN FRANCISCO — Attorney Melvin Belli has been ordered to show cause why he should not pay reasonable support to jet-set queen Pat Montandon, who claims she was not actually married to Belli in a Shinto ceremony in Japan last Oct. 12. OTTAWA — Lloyd R. Crouse (PC—Queens-Lunenbourg) complained in the Commons that French translation work in the government has built up a 2,000,000-word backlog and blamed it on the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism. He said the backlog now is equal to six man-years of work.

* * *

Wrong Bay For Minister

The United Church minister who spoke to University of Victoria students Wednesday on LSD was listed as coming from the wrong bay.

Rev. Leslie Wallwork is the minister of the Gordon Head-Cordova Bay United Church, not Cadboro Bay United Church, as reported in a story in Thursday's Colonist.

Rev. Leighton Streight of Cadboro Bay United said he had been unaware of his church getting unwittingly involved in discussions of LSD.

"I guess we'll just have to take credit for it," he chuckled.

Pollution Fight Needs 'Public Conscience'

British Columbia needs to find a "public conscience" that will perceive and respond to pollution questions, one of Canada's foremost zoologists suggested Thursday.

Dr. Ian McTaggart-Cowan, dean of graduate studies at UBC, said there is a "real need" for groups of conservation-minded people to act as a "public conscience."

He told the 17th anual B.C. Resources Conference, meeting at the Empress:

PRIVATE CITIZENS

"Civil servants can't interpret regulations which are laid down by politicians. It's not what they feel they should do or would like to do.

"In our society, there is a tremendous need for private citizens, who have nothing to gain, to speak out on pollution questions."

Dr. McTaggart-Cowan said they should be people who could not have monetary gain from any policy they advocated.

Another member ot a panel discussing water resources management suggested a reorganiaztion of the B.C. Pollution Control Board.

He wanted it set up similar to the provincial government's purchasing or civil service commissions, where it would not be directly responsible to a particular interest or government department.

He suggested a cluster of technical people work with an advisory council representing industries, municipalities and other sources of pollution.

Crime Rate Up

LONDON (AP) — The crime rate in London fell during the last six months of 1966 for the first time in 12 years, but the rate for the whole year — 282,588 indictable crimes—was 2.4 per cent higher than in 1965.

Cowichan Wages Not All Paid Yet

Labor Minister Peterson advised the legislature Thursday he does not know how long it will be before all the back wages will be paid to the employees of Cowichan Copper Co. Ltd.

In answers tabled in the House in reply to questions filed by Leo Nimsick (NDP, Kootenay), he said 145 employees were owed $39,866.82 in back wages and holiday pay and $15,000 of that amount had been paid.

The minister's reply indicated that information was not available as to when the rest of the money would be paid and that "investigation is continuing."

The department of labor took action for the wages owed, under the Payment of Wages Act, and the $15,000 was paid by the solicitor of British Metal Corporation (Canada) Ltd. on the direction of Cowichan Copper, Mr. Peterson's statement indicated.

He said unification will not be completed until 1972 — that is, eight years after the start of the program.

"It will also be done in a step-by-step, carefully calculated manner, with full regard for our operational effectiveness and the best interests of our servicemen."

Mr. Hellyer said the overlapping of the three services has given rise to many documented cases where inter-service rivalry has occurred to the detriment of the national interest.

He cited three Canadian cases: the squabble between the army and air force over development of the Caribou transport plane; refusal of the navy and air force to accept the army's FN rifle, and the navy's refusal to take the air force's word that construction of an airstrip on Sable Island, 100 miles off Halifax, would be unfeasible.

Mr. Hellyer said there is little, if any, evidence to support arguments that recruiting or re-engagement will be affected by introduction of a unified force.

Mr. Hellyer denied the stand of some critics that the government plans to maintain a peace-keeping force only.

"Our record of success in this field does not mean that the government intends now, or in the foreseeable future, to devote its military force to peace-keeping only."

★ ★ ★

Under questioning by Mr. Winch and Andrew Brewin (NDP — Toronto Greenwood), the minister said Canada will have to tell its NATO allies by December what it plans to contribute to the alliance's defences in the next five years.

Loyalty

tion against a great Canadian's record.

Mr. Hellyer said Admiral Landymore had called his naval officers together and said to them something like "Who will support me in my fight against unification?"

Mr. Forrestall said: "I hope you don't live to choke on those words."

'THAT'S DISLOYALTY?'

He said Admiral Landymore had extracted a promise from his officers.

"What type of promise?" Mr. Forrestall asked. "Not to resign." "That's an act of disloyalty?"

Mr. Hellyer said that if he had made a mistake in the case it was not to relieve Admiral Landymore of his command in the spring of 1966 instead of waiting until July 12.

VISIT PLANNED

The minister said he had planned to visit Maritime Command and verify the allegations which had come to him about the admiral.

However, Admiral Landymore had been in Europe on government business in the spring of last year and it was not possible to see him.

Mr. Hellyer said that when witnesses were being arranged for last summer's sessions of the defence committee he had decided to allow Admiral Landymore to testify "though I fully realized he might make some effort to embarrass me or government policies."

DIDN'T CARE

"I didn't care what he would say (to the committee) because he was going to be relieved of his command."

Mr. Forrestall said Mr. Hellyer had gone to great pains to see that Admiral Landymore didn't say anything embarrassing.

Mr. Hellyer said changes had been made in Admiral Landymore's brief.

But the "mechanics were irrelevant."

NOT INVITED

The Halifax MP asked if Mr. Hellyer had ever found occasion in the 18 months in question to talk to the admiral.

Mr. Hellyer said a reply already had been made to this in the Commons.

"I ask it again," Mr. Forrestall said.

Mr. Hellyer said he was not able to visit Admiral Landymore. He had not been invited to Halifax by the admiral.

"Isn't there a phone on your desk?"

"It was customary to be invited," Mr. Hellyer said.

Lake Park Guaranteed By Elk-Beaver Sale

By A. H. MURPHY

The recreational and park use of more than 700 acres of unspoiled land in the Elk-Beaver Lakes complex was safeguarded "for all time" Thursday when Victoria turned the area over to the regional district of the capital of British Columbia.

At the same time, a long-standing source of friction between Saanich and Victoria was removed.

Negotiations leading up to the transfer have been in progress but under wraps for weeks.

This came to an end at Thursday's meeting of city council. Reeve Curtis and Mayor Stephen expressed gratification.

Saanich council, Victoria council and the regional board all gave unanimous approval.

The arrangement provides:

- Ownership of the Elk-Beaver Lakes watershed will be vested in the regional district.
- The regional board will pay the city the sum of $250,000 (net) over a period of 10 years.
- Saanich will take over completely the maintenance of the area, because the regional board is authorized to acquire parkland but not to maintain it.
- The area will be dedicated in perpetuity as parkland.
- The 30-acre game farm on the east side of the Patricia Bay Highway is not included.
- Money accruing from sale of land to the Greater Victoria Water Board for use as a right-of-way will revert to the city.

SPLENDID EXAMPLE

After a city council meeting Thursday, Mayor Stephen said he considered the decision one of the most splendid examples of municipal leadership given in this district in 20 years.

Wednesday, at an in-camera meeting of the regional board, while explaining the plan to commissioners, the mayor said Victoria aldermen were "sticking their necks out" to some extent in disposing of the property for $250,000 when it could bring in millions if developed for commercial use.

PROBLEM ERASED

However, general acceptance of the plan at the local government level was indicated by complete unanimity both in Victoria and Saanich.

"A feature of the agreement which is deeply satisfying to Victoria is that it removes for all time a problem which has been a source of irritation to Saanich," the mayor added Thursday. He also observed that while Victorians did not lose the use of the park, they were relieved of the $10,000-a-year maintenance cost in addition to the $250,000 they receive.

Ald. Robert Baird, parks committee chairman, was singled out for special praise by the mayor, as was Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

Reeve Curtis of Saanich, who is also chairman of the regional board, said the transfer was "one of the finest gestures ever made in the history of local government."

SOURCE OF ANXIETY

Final disposition of the land had been a source of anxiety to Saanich for years, the reeve said, and it was always feared that it might be put to commercial use. The decision of Victoria removed that fear, and, in addition, gave the regional district a keystone for its parks system.

"My optimism is at a peak, for if it is possible to resolve a complicated and often frustrating question such as this, there is little in the field of intermunicipal relations which cannot be settled in a similarly friendly and forthright manner," the reeve said.

The matter of Victoria-owned parkland within the borders of Saanich has been a contentious question for a decade or more.

As far back as 1955, Saanich attempted to force the issue by selling a portion of the park at a land tax sale. Saanich claimed that the city owed $700 on the land and had lost all right to it by refusal to pay.

The city fought the case to the Supreme Court of British Columbia and won.

Much jockeying back and forth has taken place since that time. There has been at least one proposal to subdivide part of the property and sell it commercially.

Mayor Stephen maintained this year that such a plan now would be a sure way for an alderman to get himself hanged to the nearest lamp post, but the possibility always existed that a future council might succumb to temptation.

Values placed on the land have fluctuated, but it is generally conceded now, in municipal circles, that it is worth well upward of $2,000,000.

CEREMONY LIKELY

However, as Ald. Hugh Ramsay pointed out Thursday, this value is based on the premise that it might be developed commercially, and that intention is just not present.

As parkland, the alderman pointed out, it was worth just what the city asked and the region was willing to pay, and price was not by any means the first consideration.

A proposal to hold a transfer ceremony right on the parkland property, at which time Mayor Stephen would turn over the deed to Reeve Curtis, as regional board chairman, will probably be introduced in municipal circles in the near future.

Domestic Plants on View?

Saanich is considering a five-acre park near the municipal hall where people could wander among the largest collection of domesticated plants in Western Canada.

It would be on the north side of the hall, in the direction of Swan Lake, Coun. Ed Lum told a meeting of the Vancouver Island Nurserymen's Association Thursday night.

* * *

He said it would be a display of labelled trees, with the species grouped in such a manner that people will get ideas for home planting.

The nurserymen are thinking of a Centennial project. They had discussed donating a collection of labelled shrubs to Gorge Park, also in Saanich, but Coun. Lum explained that the municipality plans to develop that as an open area.

* * *

They were also pondering an arboretum. There isn't an arboretum in Western Canada, and some nurserymen felt Saanich and the provincial government should be asked if they would support such a project.

The nurserymen will leave the proposals with a committee for a decision.

British Ship

Sudbury Towing Drifter

The Victoria tug Sudbury II began towing the stricken British freighter Millstrader, which had been drifting helplessly 300 miles out in the Pacific since Tuesday night, at 10:05 p.m. Thursday.

The 220-foot Island Tug and Barge vessel was to have made contact with the 7,000-ton Park class freighter, which has both boilers disabled, at 3 a.m. Thursday, but a pea-soup fog and rough seas caused the two vessels to lose touch.

The drifting vessel was consequently "lost" for several hours during Thursday.

PLANE SPOTTER

It did so about noon Thursday and flew over the drifting vessel until the Sudbury II, guided by the plane, reached the scene.

However, the tug did not get a line to the vessel until 8 p.m. Thursday.

LAG UNEXPLAINED

No reason is known for this period of "dead" time. Radio communications between the Sudbury II and the Vancouver Rescue Co-ordination Centre and Island Tug and Barge head office in Victoria were extremely poor Thursday night. A company spokesman said the last full report was received early Thursday.

The tug is believed to be towing the Millstrader at less than six knots, due to rough conditions. It will not be near land until early Saturday morning.

If any problems develop during the expected 30-hour tow, the vessels may pull into Victoria. If not, they will continue to Portland, Ore., the original destination of the freighter.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST

Dispatch from a correspondent at Williams Creek:

I suppose you are in the midst of considerable excitement down below as to the capital. I have signed the petition for Victoria, but am afraid from the Governor's speech it will be of little avail. There are a good many in favor of New Westminster, but the majority seem to favor Victoria.

Miners are already preparing to leave Victoria for the mines. They are moving too early in the season for their own comfort.

Dr. Maggiel's pills were advertised on the front page:

"A very fountain of youth, for in every case they add new life and vitality, and restore the waning energies to their pristine state."

Lunch Van 'Fantastic Success'

Saanich's meals-on-wheels program, now only two weeks from being a year old, has proven a "fantastic success" in almost every way.

The observation was made Thursday by Mrs. Betty Marshall, the municipality's newly-appointed welfare administrator, when she reviewed the program.

On Thursday, 23 people who otherwise probably wouldn't have had a hot meal had prepared food brought to their door at lunch time.

"It is helping the people exactly the way we thought it would," said Mrs. Marshall. "We now deliver more than 20 meals each day."

The food is prepared by St. Joseph's Hospital and delivered by off-duty Saanich firemen in a Civil Defence feeding vehicle.

The recipient pays 50 cents for the food. The difference between the cost of the food and money collected from recipients is covered by the Douglas Rotary Club.

NOT ON WELFARE

People who receive the meals aren't welfare recipients. Mrs. Marshall said the welfare department's only interest in meals-on-wheels was organizing and co-ordinating the service.

She said elderly people now are being discharged from hospital earlier because there is an assurance they will be adequately nourished.

"Many people who have been visited by meals-on-wheels recover so quickly that the first thing we know is that they're well enough to do their own cooking," said Mrs. Marshall.

Air Polluters 'Should Pay'

People who make profits while polluting the air should pay for the privilege, a spokesman for the Esquimalt-View Royal Anti-Smoke Committee said Thursday.

Harry Gregson suggested that the cost of operating a provincial pollution control branch should be financed by a tax on the polluters.

Smithy Chases Horses

By DONALD GAIN

Business under the old spreading chestnut tree is pretty quiet these days, so a village blacksmith has to go looking for it.

"The days of horses coming to you are gone," says Fred Ball of 6863 Veyaness in Saanichton. "There's too much traffic."

Mr. Ball says he is one of only two blacksmiths in the area.

"Actually I'm a farrier," he says, "a shoer of horses. I don't do other blacksmith work."

He covers the area from the Malahat south and out as far as Sooke.

"I go to Salt Spring Island for a day every now and then," he says. "I'll work on about 20 horses in a day."

* * *

His average is from four to 10 horses a day. His shop is in his panel truck, but usually does not include a forge. "Sometimes I carry it, but it's pretty dirty," he says.

Because he knows his customers' horses, he makes up the shoes on his forge at home and then fits them on when he calls.

"Half a dozen sizes will fit about 99 per cent of the horses," he says.

Mr. Ball learned his trade at the California State Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo about 12 years ago. He has been working at it ever since.

"I got into it at the time because there were only two elderly fellows in the area shoeing horses and I felt there was a need for someone new."

Mr. Ball has a horse-hauling business in addition to his shoeing business.

"Between the two I keep busy," he says. "I don't even have time to cut my lawn."

He lives on four acres at Saanichton with his wife, Sheila, and two little girls, Lisa, 4, and Melissa, four months.

* * *

"It's an active, healthy life," he says. "I'm always on the go and I see quite a bit of the country, especially when I'm hauling horses."

Agriculture Minister:

No Speedy End To Nematode

The golden nematode took 17 years to develop in the Saanich Peninsula and it will take more than a year or so get rid of the worm, Agriculture Minister Richter told the legislature Thursday.

In reply to a question by John Tisdalle (SC, Saanich and the Islands) he said his department was working with the federal government and restrictions on the movement of nursery stock would be lifted as soon as possible.

Mr. Tisdalle said there was a need for nursery people to get out from under the restrictions as soon as possible, and asked the minister to take up their cause.

Southern Vancouver Island nurserymen since last fall have been protesting a federally-imposed quarantine on the export of soil-bearing stock from this area.

They have asked the federal government to lift the ban on all growers except those on whose land nematodes have been found.

Canvassers Needed

Canvassing will start March 1 of all Greater Victoria areas.

Court Could Snarl Dogcatcher's Duties

When a resident appears in Central Magistrate's Court and pleads not guilty to a dog-at-large charge, both Saanich poundmen are required to testify at the trial.

The trial can last anywhere from a few minutes to hours, and with both the municipality's animal controllers tied up dogs can have a field day.

Under the present system, if everyone charged with allowing a dog to be at large pleaded not guilty, the system would collapse.

Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson said Thursday the tying up of the poundmen presents a hardship to police officers who have enough to do without chasing dogs.

"We have one pound truck and two men to cover the 38 square miles of Saanich. There have been suggestions that we get another truck and have one man in each, but this also presents a problem.

"A poundman would be giving uncorroborated evidence in court if he was working alone in a truck, where now both men can testify."

The chief said another problem is that the hour of the trial is not set. Only the date is known, and whether it will be held in the morning or afternoon.

"Our men have to appear on the given date, and may have to wait hours before being called to give evidence."

Chief Pearson said he would like to see the police department and the pound authorities as two separate entities. At present he is responsible for both.

He suggested the animal controllers come under the municipality's chief inspector of services department and not the police.

"There are instances where policemen are necessary to deal with dogs, such as biting of children, but not licensing and impounding."

Goodies Face Extinction

Fernie Farm — home of hot scones, Devonshire cream and homemade strawberry jam on summer afternoons—faces closure under Milk Board regulations, Herbert Bruch (SC, Esquimalt) said Thursday.

Miss Mary Fernie and her sister, Daphne, operate the farm on William Head Road, and also sell unpasteurized milk to customers who come to the farm.

The cows and milk are all tested, Mr. Bruch said, but under Milk Marketing Board regulations the farm has been threatened with closure unless the milk is pasteurized or sold to a dairy.

Hundreds of Victorians made regular pilgrimages to tables in the farm's tree-shaded yard, where the homemade delicacies play hob with calorie counts.

Mr. Bruch told the legislature the regulations could close the farm simply because it was unable to expand.

"As long as the herd is tested, and milk meets qualifications, and people want to go to the farm and get the milk, regulations should be more flexible," he told the House.

Project Wins Approval

The joint centennial project of Colwood, Metchosin, Langford, Happy Valley and Glen Lake—a $240,000 heated swimming pool—has been approved by the federal and provincial governments.

Acceptance was announced Thursday.

The announcement said the provincial-federal share of the project will be $15,448—the remaining $224,552 will come from the communities concerned.

Colorful Ceremony Marks Official Visit to Temple

In a colorful and impressive ceremony in Holyrood House, 12 new candidates were initiated at the spring ceremonial of Miriam Temple No. 2, Daughters of the Nile.

Both the ceremonial and the banquet preceding it were arranged to honor supreme queen of Supreme Temple Mrs. Verna M. Stoltenberg, El Paso, Tex., who was making her official visit to the temple. Queen of Miriam Temple, Mrs. R. M. Williams presided during the evening.

Speaking to the meeting, Mrs. Stoltenberg thanked the local temple for its contribution of $1,175 to assist with the philanthropic work of the order. The funds will be used for Shrine hospitals for crippled children.

She told the group that temples in Canada and the United States had given braces, artificial limbs, special shoes, and other orthopedic equipment to children in out-patient departments of Shrine hospitals. Value of the contributions she said was $193,005.

Other contributions included articles of sewing and knitting, providing gifts and parties for the young patients, totalling $109,335.

Other special guests who attended the meeting and social hour following were Supreme Princess Zora Mrs. J. Broill, Ammon-Ra Temple No. 56, Reno, Nev.; Princess Royal Mrs. D. Parrish, Princess Tirzah Mrs. L. Dolph, and Princess Badoura Mrs. K. Larson of Nydia Temple No. 4, Portland, Ore.; 16 members of Zarah Temple No. 72, Vancouver, including Queen Mrs. W. Landells, and Princess Nydia Mrs. T. Gibbons.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Shepherd of Townsite Road, Nanaimo, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary recently. They were married in the home of the bride's parents at Corinna, Maine, on Feb. 14, 1917, moving to Bow Island, Alta., where they farmed until their two sons, Calvin and Howard, took over in 1945 on their return from serving overseas during the Second World War. Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd retired to Medicine Hat, Alta. and later moved to Nanaimo in 1951. They have another son Donald and two daughters, Dorothy Shepherd and Mrs. Judy Hall. Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: The letter written by "Janet," the teen-ager who hated her alcoholic father touched me deeply. I grew up in a home where father was seldom sober. I suffered many indignities because of his drunkenness.

I would like to tell Janet this: Your father is desperately ill, not just physically but mentally. The anguish he has caused you is nothing compared to the torment HE endures.

You wouldn't hate your father if he were dying of cancer, would you? In a way, alcoholism can be worse than cancer because so often people refuse to recognize that an alcoholic is ill. They keep saying, "He could straighten up if he wanted to" and, "All it takes is will power."

You can help your father if you have the courage and the desire to do so. Tell your mother, your doctor, your minister, anyone who might help, that your father needs hospitalization. It won't be easy.

I remember my mother's refusal to admit that Father was mentally ill. He had to try suicide before she was persuaded.

And please don't waste any more time or energy hating your father. He hates himself enough for both of you. Try love and understanding. And above all, get him the help he needs. — FORMER ALATEEN

Dear Former: Your signature came as no surprise. I urge all teen-agers who must live with an alcoholic parent to contact this superb organization which is a branch of Alcoholics Anonymous. The national headquarters is: Alcoholic Foundation, Box 459, Grand Central Station, New York, N.Y. 10017.

★ ★ ★

Dear Ann Landers: You have printed several letters about telephone courtesy over the years and I hope you will print one more.

I'm a business woman who uses the telephone a great deal. I don't mind it when a secretary brag to be super-efficient but I hate conversations that go like this:

Secretary answers phone: "Mr. Brown's office.

Me: "May I speak to Mr. Brown please?"

Sec.: "Mr. Brown is out at the moment. If you will leave your name and number I will have Mr. Brown return your call."

Me.: "Never mind. I'll call again later."

Sec.: "May I ask who is calling, please?"

Now this last sentence is what burns me up. If I had wanted to identify myself I would have done so when the secretary asked me to leave my name and number. Perhaps I wanted to speak to Mr. Brown about a trivial matter and didn't want him to wrack his brain wondering why I was calling. Or maybe I just wanted to surprise him. Do you understand what I mean? — DANDER UP

Dear Up: If Mr. Brown is a busy executive he doesn't have time for "surprises." Do you know what I mean?

A cardinal rule of telephone courtesy is that the person who places the call should identify himself at once. To expect a busy person to return a blind phone call is not only presumptuous but arrogant.

TV TALK

By ROBIN JEFFREY

At the cost of my vitally needed beauty sleep, I propped up my eyelids and watched Nightcap on Channel 2 Wednesday night at 11:45. But I won't forsake my beauty sleep again.

"Now THAT is a mini-skirt!"

A Toronto satire series, Nightcap was the subject of a feature in a national magazine shortly before it went off the CBC network six weeks ago.

If the show proves anything, it is the difficulty of writing good satire.

Wednesday's effort had half a dozen skits, none of which was capable of producing a real laugh. There were a few slams at Chairman Mao and French Canada, a satire on the movie Alfie, a review of newspaper headlines and a chat with Peter Reilly.

Perhaps the best line of the show came when the much-resigned Reilly was asked to compare the public affairs departments of CTV and the CBC. "Let's put it this way," Reilly said, "on Sunday night (before W5 or Sunday) it was like seeing your mother-in-law drive over a cliff in your brand new car."

Two men and three girls make up the Nightcap cast (there's also a band), but there doesn't appear to be a David (TW3) Frost among them.

If you have to stay up late, Nightcap is perhaps livelier than an old movie, and it probably comes up with a rollicking show occasionally. But don't pass up your beauty sleep on the chance.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

On this deal from the 1967 Team Trials, Mrs. Dorothy Hayden succeeded in halting the bidding at the right spot, but she encountered devastating defence. To see if you can get off to the same fast start as Marshall Miles of San Bernardino, Calif., choose your lead before reading on.

The majority of Team Trialists climbed to a hopeless game contract on the N-S cards, but Mrs. Hayden managed to stop at three diamonds. Unfortunately, she ran into a defensive wall that gave her virtually no chance.

Miles, West, set a trap by underleading spade ace. After the inevitable wrong guess by declarer, East — Eddie Kanter of Los Angeles — won the queen of spades and returned equally cunning trump five.

The bidding:

Pass	2 ◇	Pass	3 ♣
Pass	3 ◇	All Pass

Opening lead: Spade deuce

Put yourself in declarer's position. East's trump return means you can get only one heart ruff, so you must expect to lose at least one heart trick—as well as two spades and a minimum of one diamond. The chance that East holds specifically K-Q-5—allowing you to make your contract by playing the jack—is only about 10 per cent. If you finesse and lose, you will probably go down an extra trick, West's trump return killing your chance to ruff a heart in dummy. You can't afford to go down more tricks than other pairs, so you probably do what the actual declarer did. Mrs. Hayden, a trained mathematician, rose with the diamond ace. Down one!

Band Checks Sawmill Business

DUNCAN — Cowichan Indian Band is planning to start a mobile sawmill operation, providing employment for about six men.

Abel Joe has been appointed to see if there is enough raw material, whether there is a market, and whether band members can be trained without too much difficulty.

In other band business:

The laying of pipe into the Klem Klem Alutz area is expected to start soon.

The cost for the three-mile line will be $16,426.

The line will serve 27 homes on the reserve.

One of the customers will be St. Catherine's Indian School on Tzouhalem Road.

The water will be bought in bulk from the City of Duncan.

CITY WATER

The new line will be connected to the city water system at the corner of Maple Bay and Tzouhalem Roads.

The band granted permission to the Cowichan Waterbouys Skin Diving Club to have their swimmers land at the Silver Bridge on Easter weekend.

The club and skin divers from Nanaimo and Victoria will have a swim competition from Skutz Falls to the bridge.

RESOLUTION

Secretary Louise Underwood said "Council is also investigating a resolution submitted to the Union of B.C. Municipalities regarding a petition to the provincial government, to initiate action with the federal government, to obtain the contract of B.C. Indian Affairs on the basis of education, welfare, health, employment and training."

She said "The band feels the resolution is a bit premature but we'll look into the matter further."

The band also:

- Was advised by the agricultural minister the Cowichan Indian Reserve will be included in the Canada Land Inventory Program, but field work would not be completed until 1970 and survey results would not be available until some time after.
- Asked the education committee to elect two Cowichan Band representatives for the Queen of Angels School Board.
- Approved the estimated amount of $14,140 for the 1967-68 band revenue budget.
- Submitted a request to the minister to approve a grant to the band council regarding part payment for a full time band manager, secretary-treasurer and clerical assistant.

New Group Helps Indians, Dual Attitude Under Fire

By MARIE CADORETTE

COBBLE HILL—A new organization to fight for the underprivileged, particularly Indians, has been formed here. It will demand social justice for those who need it.

The group, as yet unnamed, includes women representing PTAs, church groups and service organizations.

The group was formed following an eloquent speech by Louise Underwood, secretary of the Cowichan Band.

* * *

Miss Underwood said a dual welfare attitude exists, and the women decided it should be investigated.

They organized the new group at the home of Mrs. Ralph Dowling.

Guest speakers at the first meeting were Ray Ferris, department of social welfare, Mrs. Lewis Langlois, public health nurse, and George Manuel, community development worker for the Cowichan Indian Band.

* * *

Mr. Manuel said Indians did not choose to live on reserves, and this was alien to their type of life.

He said many laws robbed the Indian of his initiative and pride. This led to the general deterioration of Indian peoples across Canada.

* * *

But Mr. Manuel said it was not the original intention of the Indian Act which was provided to protect the Indian.

He said now the Indians need acceptance by the middle and high-class white society.

'Force Province To Pay More'

COURTENAY—Ald. Geoff Browning says the provincial government should accept a much greater share of the school budget.

He criticized the sharing arrangement now in effect. Ald. Browning was discussing the present $2,900,000 school budget here.

He suggested city council fail to approve a formal motion of acceptance of the budget, as a protest.

Variety Show Aids Building

DUNCAN — Teen Town has lined up a variety show to be presented twice this Sunday, at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m., at the Duncan Elementary gymnasium.

Tickets for the two-and-half-hour shows may be obtained at Duncan stores.

* * *

The program will be performed by western and popular vocalists, singing and dancing groups, three rock bands, a magician and the harmonaires.

Duncan Drama Club will contribute a skit. Rod McKay will be the master of ceremonies.

Teen Town building fund consists of $2,270 in the bank, $250 in shares with the Credit Union, and $343 in the general account.

* * *

The provincial Teen Town convention will be held during the Easter weekend March 25, 26 and 27, at Penticton.

Another Road Needed On Busy Waterfront

By MARY TAYLOR

PORT ALBERNI — Heavy traffic on the waterfront is making another good road a desperate need.

"A road is needed to funnel off some of the heavy traffic on the main Third Avenue and Argyle Street area.

The waterfront road came up in discussions between city council and the harbor commission.

A six-inch water line is to be put in from Bird Street and Argyle so that a fire hydrant can be installed, as ordered recently by Fire Chief Maurice Smith.

"The fire hydrant will provide good protection for the fishing fleet and will also provide for the Somass lumber assembly area," Chairman Dennis O'Brien explained.

A new sewer outlet on the old Tahsis property was also requested from council and met with a good reception.

Seafever Gets Mast Job

Skilled hands eased a one-ton mast back into place on Seafever, 51-foot auxiliary sloop at Maple Bay Marina, Bird's Eye Cove. Craft is owned by three Seattle residents. It took part in Swiftsure and Honolulu races. It was designed by architect Ben Seaborn. It is valued at more than $150,000.

Trustees Read The Fine Print

DUNCAN—School trustees here will investigate all future property purchase contracts for road allowance provisions.

The school board recently purchased six acres of land located between Drinkwater and Sherman Roads, but 2.2 acres was required by North Cowichan municipality for a future road.

Trustee J. R. Bailey stated the oversight was $2,000 poured down the drain.

Suicide Ruled In Death

NAKUSP (CP) — The death earlier this month of a B.C. Hydro land superintendent here has been classified as suicide.

Coroner Dr. F. B. Maxfield said Tuesday he made the ruling after an inquiry showed Gerald Mead, 34, died of an overdose of barbiturates.

Dr. Maxfield said he had prescribed the barbiturates for Mead to counter business tension.

Garden Notes

Small Lot Trees

By M. V. CHESNUT

A garden without a tree is almost unthinkable, but selecting a suitable tree for a small city lot isn't easy. The less space there is available, the more carefully should the tree be chosen and, with tree-planting time almost upon us, it is not too early to collect some nursery catalogues and start making a study of the situation.

One particularly dainty tree for the small garden is the winter-flowering plum, prunus subhirtella autumnalis, with fragile-looking twigs which produce masses of pinky-white blossoms at intervals from November until March. This little fellow never surrenders to the winter's blast — a mild spell and out comes a crop of blossoms. These wither and die in severe cold but are followed immediately by another flush of bloom as soon as the weather moderates.

Prunus malaheb, the St. Lucie cherry, is probably the most fragrant of all the smaller trees, bearing a profusion of sweetly scented white blossoms. I understand there is also a semi-weeping form of the St. Lucie cherry, but it seems rather hard to come by — I can't find it listed in any of my nursery catalogues.

A most graceful tree not too large for the medium-sized town garden is the snowy mespilus, amelanchier canadensis, also called shadbush and serviceberry. This one grows to a height of about 25 feet and covers itself with attractive white blossoms before the tree leafs out. These are followed by purple berries — edible although almost ecompletely tasteless, but highly ornamental and attractive to birds. The foliage turns a particularly cheerful shade of yellow in the fall.

The Judas tree, cercis siliquastrum, is a member of the pea family. While it is not too tall for even a tiny garden, it is inclined to "middle-age spread." Nevertheless, it is well worth a place for its pink or rosy-mauve pea-shaped flowers. Another pea-relative, laburnum vossi, is a grand subject for the small garden, bearing long clusters of golden bloom.

If I had the room and the right soil, I'd like very much to take a crack at growing halesia carolina, the Snowdrop tree. It isn't easy to make this subject comfortable in the average garden, as it demands a deep, light loam soil and a situation which is well drained and on the dry side in winter but with unfailing moisture in summer — conditions not too easy to meet in our climate.

The snowdrop tree, also called the silver bell tree, seldom grows taller than 20 feet in our climate, although it makes twice this height in the deep south. The virginal snowdrop-like blossoms come in May.

I mentioned in an earlier column that the Americans have discovered our Canadian rosybloom crabapple, and U.S. nursery catalogues are raving about these fine small trees. They seem to be particularly enthusiastic over one called Royalty, developed at the Sutherland forestry farm near Saskatoon. Royalty has glowing violet-red foliage all summer, dark red blossoms in spring and highly ornamental scarlet fruits in the fall.

★ ★ ★

The Almey rosybloom crab is Canada's centennial tree, although this fact is seldom mentioned in the U.S. catalogues. Developed at the Dominion Experimental Station at Morden, Man., it grows to about 15 feet in height and starts blooming while still quite a young tree and retains its blossoms for a longer period of time each spring than any other ornamental crabapple. The foliage is maroon purple in spring, changing to a bronzy green while the blossoms are bright red with a white star in the centre followed by very dark red fruits, not big enough to attract destructive small boys but useful for jelly.

Counterfeit Coolth

SYDNEY HARRIS

One of the many things I like about young people today is the whole concept of "playing it cool." To be able to keep their cool is as important to them as keeping "dignity" or "grace" or "honor" or any of the old-fashioned words that previous generations used as yardsticks of excellence.

★ ★ ★

Keeping your cool means not over-reacting to a situation — not gushing, or panicking, or becoming self-righteous or self-pitying, as so many of their elders tend to do in time of emergency. It is essentially a medieval and aristocratic attitude — although most of the cool cats would be astonished (and perhaps dismayed) to know it.

But, like any other virtue, coolness has its dark inner lining, which is not so attractive; and many youngsters fail to distinguish between the outer and the inner sides of this quality. To them, coolness has become an end in itself, rather than an appropriate attitude. They stay cool even when they should get warm.

Coolness can be motivated by positive factors, or by negative ones. The positive factors are a sense of proportion, of irony, of humor, of philosophic detachment, of stoicism, of awareness that the obvious is not necessarily the real or the good or the true.

★ ★ ★

There is another kind of coolness — or coolth, if you will — that is motivated by negative factors. These negative factors are mostly kinds of fear — fearing of being wrong, fear of displaying emotion, fear of expressing "out" opinions, fear of violating the current dogmas and rituals of the cool society.

★ ★ ★

This counterfeit coolness is what becomes an end in itself with many youngsters — and, in certain situations, it is as inappropriate as the warmth they are rebelling against. For there are times when we cannot remain detached, we should not be stoical, we must disagree with our peers, we should violate whatever dogmas and rituals we feel to be wrong-headed or wrong-hearted.

Coolness, to be effective and authentic, must be an attitude, not a reaction. It is not a suit of armor to be slipped on, to repel the injuries of the world; rather, it is an internal part of the personality, or it is nothing. A phony cool cat is no better — and perhaps worse — than the phony members of the bourgeoisie he despises.

Fear is what motivates all phonies, on all levels of society, from the most conventional to the most outlandish. People are afraid to be who they are, and become what they think those around them would like them to be. To be cool simply because those around you are cool is no more authentic or life-giving than to be frigid, torrid, or tepid.

The Erotic World of SHEILAH GRAHAM

Sax and Sexy Girl

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—You haven't seen anything until you see Jane Fonda swooning with love for a saxophone in Hurry Sundown. How this passed the censors, I'll never know . . . The wife of Tony Curtis, Christine, has a standing order with Valentino of New York to deliver four dresses to her every month regardless of where she happens to be. And he can choose them. Christine happens to be in Rome right now with Tony, who is making On My Way to the Crusades I Met a Girl Who . . . But the dresses come as regular as the geese of Canada fly south every winter.

★ ★ ★

While Diane Cilento is making her Witch of Rose Hall movie in Jamaica, husband Sean Connery will be making all the golf courses in the vicinity. He is mad about the ancient sport, and has brought his handicap down to about seven.

★ ★ ★

With Warren Beatty getting so many invitations to dinner at the White House, his intimates are wondering whether he is planning to step into the fashionable shoes of George Hamilton. I can tell them no. Warren likes a more comfortable anonymous life. He is in New York now, talking to Warners about his completed Bonnie and Clyde, and discussing his next which has the awkward title of Hair.

★ ★ ★

Ex-Queen Soraya didn't make it in films, but Princess Ira Fustenberg is doing fine. She is now in Berlin, on her fourth movie, Dead Run, in less than a year. It's an espionage thriller, with Peter Lawford. Her first, Matchless in Italy. Then I Killed Rasputin in Paris, then back to Rome for Caprice. Her executive-admirer, Count Francois d'Aulaus, has not ventured to Berlin to visit her — by order of Ira — "I want to concentrate completely on the film." 'Tis a pity he won't see her making it. It one scene she wears a mini-mink coat with absolutely nothing underneath.

★ ★ ★

Howard Koch is doing better since he stepped down from running all of Paramount production in Hollywood. He has two goodies on his schedule — On A Clear Day You Can See Forever with Barbara Streisand; and The Odd Couple, starring Jack Lemmon and Walter Matthau. All this and no worries.

★ ★ ★

Dirk Bogarde received rave reviews in England for his portrayal of a philosophy professor in Accident, for Joe Losey who directed Dirk in the memorable movie, The Servant. Dirk is always good. I can't understand why he doesn't get good offers from Hollywood.

★ ★ ★

With movies getting so frank, one wonders where they will end. Producer Raymond Stross was remarking that his picture with Sandy Dennis, The Fox, "will be the most erotic English language film ever made."

JACK SMITH Meets a Novel Type

Mix Zippy Kadota Figs . . .

Since the burglar made off with my typewriter, I've been trying to find another old one with the same touch. The other morning I wandered into our neighborhood typewriter shop.

I was fiddling with an old Underwood when a young woman walked up. "Can I help you?"

"Surely," she said. She slipped a piece of paper off a pile and handed it to me.

I ran the paper into the roller and made a few tentative pecks at the keys. I am always self-conscious when I try a typewriter in a shop. She was watching. I typed a line.

She smiled. "Everybody does that," she said.

"I beg your pardon?"

"Nine out of 10 people type the same thing — 'Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their parties.' "

"Yes, I know," I said. "Stupid, isn't it?"

"It really isn't any good at all, you know," she said. "It doesn't have a Z in it, or an X, J, Q or K. None of the hard ones."

"That's a classic," she conceded. "It has everything. And it's possible."

"Possible?"

"Yes. I mean, a quick brown fox could jump over a lazy dog's back, couldn't it? It isn't just nonsense."

"You're right," I agreed.

"But it's such an old one," she said. "I'd rather make up my own."

"Like what?"

"May I?" she typed a line.

★ ★ ★

"Why that's quite good," I said. "Is it possible?"

"Oh yes. It's kind of like a recipe."

"Well, let me try one," I said. I thought wildly for a moment, then typed, "exquisite jade makes fiery witches ban love."

She scanned it. "There's no Z," she said.

"There's no P or G, either. And I'm not sure it's possible."

I was going to argue that point, but I noticed the manager standing off about 10 feet, eyeing us. He seemed restive.

★ ★ ★

"I'll just try another one," I said. "Sexy jokes." I wrote, "don't faze wild aquatic mama bears."

She was fascinated. "That's good!" she exclaimed. Her smile vanished. "But there's no G, and no H."

The manager sidled our way.

"Well, I don't know about the machine for sure," I told her, speaking loud enough for the manager. "I'll think about it overnight. Be back tomorrow, maybe."

"Bye now," she said. "Don't forget zippy kadota figs."

★ ★ ★

After dinner I got out my notebook and pencil and went to work. It isn't as easy as one might think. You get a Z and an X and a Q, only to find out you haven't got something easy like a D. But I licked it.

I couldn't get back to the typewriter shop till Saturday. I didn't see the saleslgirl around. The manager moved toward me.

"Miss Grover is out to lunch," he told me. "Can I help you?"

★ ★ ★

"Ah, yes," I said. "Would you give her a message?"

"Certainly."

"I'll just type it out," I said. I typed out "crazy mixed up fignewtons live in bad joke quonset huts."

"Give her that," I told him. "She'll understand."

Police Approve 80 Mph

By WAYNE THOMAS

I was doing 80 miles an hour through Victoria this week in a $2,000 "special," knocked down a stupid pedestrian who stepped off a curb without looking, and was given only a mild reprimand by BCAA driving supervisor Neil Ross.

The police? Ha! They approved.

Not that I've got contacts, but the incident was simulated in the new $40,000 British Columbia Automobile Association driver-training unit which must surely be the quickest, easiest and most efficient way to learn to drive.

SIX CARS

The mobile trailer unit, 54 feet by 10 feet, has six car mock-ups along each wall, a screen at the rear and a film projector at the front.

The trainees, "the large percentage of whom are NOT students, but men and women," said Mr. Ross emphatically, drive their mock-ups as if they were cars, following the films.

BELTS TOO

The "cars" are quite realistic, with Ford dashboards, pedals, both manual and automatic gears, wing mirrors, sliding seats and safety belts.

They also have electric motors, which I found can stall or show an indicated 80 miles an hour in top gear.

All controls in the mock-up cars are linked to a printed circuit matrix board in an electronic recorder. This enables the instructor to tell immediately, by watching a panel of lights, or a graph, what the trainee is doing.

COLOR FILMS

The units, which have been on the market for almost seven years, are made by a Californian offshoot of a Toronto company, Raytheon Electronics Ltd.

The unit is at present equipped with 12 step-by-step films, all in color and wide-screen.

There will always be the cynics who will look at the little green "toy" cars and think they are for children. But Mr. Ross explained that it has been found possible to educate 50 per cent more new drivers than in dual-control road cars, and at 30 per cent less cost.

The Greater Victoria School Board has for some time been interested in the use of simulated driver-training for students because there just aren't enough dual-control road cars available.

Mr. Ross, an RCAF bomber pilot over Germany during the Second World War, learned to fly in a Link trainer — an early flight-simulator.

After the war, he thought the idea would apply readily to trainee-drivers and pioneered the use of a simulator driving program in Vancouver.

"Not so fast, not so fast," he told me. "A pedestrian walks off the street just up ahead."

But the film, shot in Florida, had some nice scenery and I ran into him with a sickening crunch.

Determined not to be caught, I stepped on the gas, feeling like Snoopy escaping from the Red Baron, and the red needle climbed, 65 . . 70 . . 75 . . 80 miles an hour.

"Okay, better give it away now," Mr. Ross said, walking without concern down the aisle. I unbuckled my seat belt, feeling nervous and with sweat lining my brow.

Pensions Office Swamped With Forms

By NANCY BROWN

There was a 512-ton mountain of booklets and forms in the regional old-age security office for B.C., on the fourth floor of Victoria's post office slightly more than a week ago.

The mountain was made of information and application forms for the new guaranteed income supplement to the old-age pension. They were mailed out to the 150,000 provincial pensioners.

Since then the office has been buried under mounds of returned forms.

WORK AREA

To cope with the flow of up to 15,000 pieces of mail daily, a staff of 96 has been hired and trained, office furniture and equipment requisitioned, and a number of offices remodelled to provide a clear working area.

In charge of the large-scale manouvre are W. H. Davis, regional director of family allowances and old age security, and T. C. Wilson, supervisor of old age security.

SAME DAY

Explanatory booklets and application forms were mailed out to the 150,000 old-age pensioners in the province on Feb. 13, and the first two applications were received the same day.

The next day a handful of forms was returned, but by Wednesday the hastily recruited staff, trained in a crash program for up to a week, was snowed under by 5,000 to 15,000 forms daily.

QUICK ACTION

Hopefully, some 40 per cent of those approved will receive supplements of up to $30 a month on their March pension cheques, according to Mr. Davis.

Most will be shown in April and the rest in May. Payments will be retroactive to January, 1967, or four months before the application date.

Last week there was a continuous stream of Victoria applicants at the old age security counters, occupying up to 10 clerks at a time.

FOUR ENOUGH

This week four are enough to handle the flow.

An income statement has to be filled out, but pensions, gifts and money received from sale of posessions are not included.

If a pensioner has sold a house and is receiving monthly mortgage payments, he declares only the interest he is receiving, the principal is not calculated.

TWO BY TWO

Couples are asked to apply together. They receive the same grants as single people.

Their total income is added and divided by two, so that each receives a similar supplement.

Once the initial spate of applications is processed, forms will be included, and the supplement given as soon as pensions are granted.

Curtis Urges Support

Reeve Hugh Curtis appealed Thursday to Saanich organizations interested in recreation to support the municipality's $1,250,000 referendum March 18.

He mailed letters outlining the program to all groups which submitted briefs when council first studied recreation proposals last year.

The reeve said it was not economically possible to meet all of Saanich's recreation requirements at one time.

TOP PRIORITY

However, top priority will be given to a $400,000 ice arena in the Tillicum area and "the other facilities will follow in logical sequence."

Reeve Curtis said council took great care to provide indoor recreation facilities to as broad an age group as possible.

Of the total estimated cost of $1,250,000, Saanich has proposed a financing plan that will involve borrowing only $850,000, and repayment over 20 years.

TRANSLATED

The remaining $300,000 will be raised by one-mill levies in 1967 and 1968 and an appropriation of $100,000 from the tax sale lands account.

"Translated into taxes for a home worth $12,000 to $15,000, the levy for this recreational program is only $6 to $7 a year," said the reeve.

"The reflection of increasing assesements over the next few years will reduce this per-property cost."

Historical Ship Bought

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—An historic old vessel with a career that included gun-running during the Irish rebellion has been purchased as part of Ulster's history from a local firm.

The 460-ton Clyde Valley, built by M. Llwaine Lewis and Co. Ltd. of Belfast in 1886, now is lying in Sydney, N.S., harbor. Harold Lake of H. B. Clyde Lake Shipping here, said the vessel had been sold to a group headed by S. J. Campbell of Whitehead, Northern Ireland.

Crew Escapes Sinking Schooner

HALIFAX (CP) — The 79-foot coastal schooner Maureen and Michael sank in heavy seas south of Newfoundland Thursday, but all eight crew members escaped safely to an American coast guard cutter standing by.

The air-sea rescue centre said it was believed all eight are in good condition and said they would be landed by the cutter Castle Rock in St. John's, Nfld.

Medicoop Plan Urged

The legislature was told Thursday that B.C. needs a medicare program for chickens.

William Hartley (NDP, Yale-Lillooet) asked the government to remove the $3-to-$10 fee charged by the department of agriculture's poultry pathology laboratory in Abbotsford.

Instead of charging for examination of diseased or dead birds, the government should perhaps pay the growers 25 cents per bird to encourage them to use the laboratory, he said, adding, "Of course, this would be medicare for chickens."

Mr. Hartley said most small poultry producers on Vancouver Island and in the Fraser Valley could not afford to send their birds to the laboratory.

Dubious Financial Practices

Goal: National Guards

TORONTO (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson said Thursday night the federal government plans federal-provincial meetings for action to protect the public against questionable financial practices.

Speaking at a party rally, he said:

"Some recent experiences within our financial community have created a rising demand for further regulatory action in this area by government.

"The federal government has already, among other things, put forward legislation on deposit insurance. We are also planning federal - provincial meetings to discuss action that will give greater protection to the private investor and to the public interest in financial operations."

ANNUAL DINNER

Mr. Pearson spoke to the annual prime minister's dinner of the Toronto and District Liberal Association.

Mr. Pearson said new dimensions in policy-making face Parliament, including need for dealing with such matters as divorce reform, changes in the Criminal Code on birth control and abortion, elimination of air and water pollution and consumer protection against "fraud and greed."

"To meet this challenge will require a lot of parliamentary legislation. And if we are to get action on that legislation in time, we must reform our rules and procedures; not merely by tinkering with them but by a complete overhauling.

"New policies will also require the closest possible federal - provincial co - operation. Such co-operation at this time within our present constitution is more important than amending the constitution.

"Let's not fool ourselves about this. Changes in the British North America Act — and great national meetings to talk about such changes — will not themselves solve our practical problems. It is comforting, but mere escapism, to think that they might.

"If the will is present at the federal and provincial levels of government today, we can work out the kind of co-operative and constructive action necessary to improve our national life within the constitution we have."

Malahat Inquest

Passing Point Still Unsolved

The point of whether a car had attempted to pass another or whether the overtaken car had slowed down went unresolved in a marathon coroner's inquest Thursday.

The five-man, two-women jury was hearing evidence in the traffic deaths of Charles and Nellie Dickens of Cobble Hill who apparently died instantly in a head-on collision near Shawnigan Lake Feb. 4.

RCMP Constable Richard Lee told the inquest when he arrived at the accident scene he had a brief conversation with Robert James Bugg, 178 Helmcken Road, and did not connect Mr. Bugg's car with the accident until later.

SLOW-MOVING CAR

He interviewed Mr. Bugg Feb. 6 and was told he was travelling north on the Trans-Canada Highway when he came up on a slow-moving car travelling in the centre of two northbound lanes.

Mr. Bugg said he moved into the right lane to pass the slow-moving car, Const. Lee testified.

The bumper of the Bugg car was bent, said Const. Lee.

Mr. Bugg told the jury he had not told the constable he was attempting to pass the slow-moving car. He said the slow car dropped back as he drew alongside.

FELT TUG

As the centre lane car "appeared to lose ground" and went out of his sight, Mr. Bugg said he felt a tug on his car and had difficulty controlling it.

He said he had been too busy trying to control the car to see the crash but had heard it.

He told the jury he would have been quite content to stay in the curb lane at a speed of 40 to 45 miles an hour right up to the top of the Malahat.

NO ONE AHEAD

"There was no one ahead of me," he said.

The inquest was adjourned until 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Victoria Law Courts.

Stamp Fortune Up in Flames

ROME (AP)—The Italian government is putting a match to 57,000,000 old postage stamps worth millions of dollars. Destruction of 255 sacks of unsold stamps, issued between 1859 and 1963, has begun. They are being burned to clean out the postal ministry's cupboard and prevent the philatelic deflation that would result if they were thrown into the market.

Definition Needed

Industrialists attending the British Columbia Natural Resources Conference are trying to use to their advantage the fact that there is no definition of pollution, a University of Victoria biologist said Thursday.

The observation was made by Dr. Alan Austin, who has attended most of the sessions now in progress at the Empress Hotel. (See also Page 18.)

"The lack of a definition for pollution is being used by industrialists as something to hide behind," he said.

NEW INTEREST

Dr. Austin said the situation underlined the urgency for a definition of the term, in respect to the various resources.

However, he noted that most experts registered for the conference seemed to be expressing a "new tenor" of interest in preserving environmental quality.

"At last, I feel a little optimistic," said Dr. Austin. "I am coming out of my depths of pessimism."

ENDS TODAY

The year's conference is focussed on water resources management. It concludes today with discussions of conservation and the economics of developing and diverting the resource.

During Thursday's sessions, Howard DeBeck, comptroller of the B.C. water rights branch, said that in the present state of technology and economics, rivers must be used to carry wastes to the sea.

The use of water for transporting waste is something which cannot be overlooked and it must be numbered among the major uses of the water resources, he stated.

Water Stays At Home

The B.C. provincial government and Ottawa are at least seeing eye-to-eye on one thing during the current "go-it-alone" controversy — B.C.'s water resources will be kept this side of the Canada-U.S. border for the near future.

But it ends there.

Ottawa, and especially Liberal member for Montreal St. Lawrence—St. George, John Turner, wants the water, which amounts to a quarter of the world's supply, for nearby Prairie provinces as well.

More than 200 delegates at the 17th annual B.C. Natural Resources Conference, meeting in the Empress Hotel from Wednesday to tonight, were told this in no uncertain terms Thursday night by Mr. Turner.

In a fast, witty and hard-hitting 35-minute speech which ranged from a strong stand on confederation to jokes about tom cats, Mr. Turner urged that B.C.'s water be shared out in Canada.

Umpire's Decision

Merchant Guild Appeals Ruling Over 'Violation'

The Canadian Merchant Service Guild has appealed the decision of a government umpire that the guild was in violation of the Canadian Labor Congress constitution.

The umpire, Carl Goldenberg of Montreal, was called in to investigate charges of raiding levelled by the B.C. Government Employees' Association after the guild signed up members of the B.C. Ferry Authority service.

"There is nothing we can do at this level," said Capt. Robert Owen, regional representative of the guild and the man who has been involved in discussions with the B.C. Civil Service Commission and the ferry authority on matters of pay, working conditions and schedules, on behalf of the deck officers and engineers of the government ferries.

TOP LEVEL

"We have discussed the matter. Naturally, we feel Mr. Goldenberg is wrong, and we are not behaving improperly.

"We understand our national president has appealed the decision. This is the level at which it will have to be handled."

The captain said he felt the fact the guild had been representing the officers in discussions with the provincial government entities should indicate the government, at least, regarded the guild as a bargaining agent.

NOT RECOGNIZED

The guild, however, failed to receive federal recognition last October in its bid for certification. The Canadian Labor Relations Board denied its application on the grounds the federal Disputes and Investigations Act did not apply to B.C. Crown agencies.

At that time the government employees' group, the B.C. attorney - general's department and the ferry authority opposed the application.

In spite of this, the guild has been acting as the unofficial spokesman for the officers in the negotiations on wages and working conditions.

Capt. Owen said Thursday his group expects an answer from the government on these matters by the end of the month.

Flood Claims Sent To Insurance Firm

Saanich has sent on to the municipality's insurance company about six damage claims from residents who were flooded during last month's downpour.

The claims are mainly for losses caused when basements were flooded shortly after the Jan. 19 storm.

Accident Victim Now Satisfactory

Victim of a head-on crash on the Patricia Bay Highway near Island View Road Saturday was in satisfactory condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital early today.

Mrs. Dorothy Hampton, 2640 Cook Street, was a passenger in a car involved in a head-on collision.

Driver of the other car, Ronnie Dean Smedland, 19, of Poulsbo, Wash., has been sentenced to three months in jail after being charged with dangerous driving. Court was told there had been evidence of drinking.

Mrs. Hampton was in critical condition when admitted to hospital Saturday, but has shown steady improvement.

Another accident victim, Mrs. Ruth Lacey, 1177 Goldstream, remains in critical condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

She has not recovered consciousness since a car in which she was riding was involved in a collision at Haultain and Shakespeare Streets, Jan. 20.

Mine Output Tops Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Value of Canada's mineral production passed the $4,000,000,000 mark last year—four years ahead of predictions, the president of the Mining Association of Canada said here.

W. S. Kirkpatrick told the association's annual meeting that 1966, when 13 new mines came into production, was the eighth consecutive year of increased production.

Until Allies, Too, Unify Forces

No Navy Generals Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday that the navy will be able to keep its rank titles until allied countries also unify their armed forces.

He also told the Commons defence committee that even after the common uniform is issued in four or five years, servicemen may continue to wear their traditional walking-out uniforms on appropriate occasions.

He did not define "appropriate occasions."

* * *

Mr. Hellyer made clear in a 54-page brief read to the committee that a new rank structure for the unified services will be introduced. The structure will be largely the army's.

He added, "It is my intention to authorize members of the Canadian armed forces to use rank titles traditional to their former service. That is the general policy."

* * *

Later, in reply to Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East), the minister said the regulations will permit sailors to continue to use their present rank titles, such as petty officer. Promotion would not require them to change to army nomenclature.

If unification were successful and "some years from now when other countries follow suit," a consensus would arise for the full adoption of the titles of the unified force.

The five-man defence staff was present — in navy, army and air force uniforms — for the committee session.

Mr. Hellyer told Gordon Churchill, former Conservative defence minister, that their attendance was possible because his department is running so smoothly.

Mr. Hellyer said unification will not require any change in the organization of combat units "and, therefore, combat

Hellyer:

Admiral Long Disloyal

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday night that Rear-Admiral William Landymore was fired for "18 months of consistent disloyalty to the policies of the people he was paid to serve."

The minister conceded under persistent questioning by Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) that he did not once talk to the admiral during those 18 months.

Mr. Hellyer said that from November, 1964, Admiral Landymore, then chief of Maritime Command, fully understood the government's policy on unification and was unalterably opposed to it.

He said the admiral returned to Halifax from the Ottawa conference in that month and did "everything he possibly could" to prepare for a confrontation on the issue.

QUALIFIED NO

Mr. Forrestall asked whether the minister thought Admiral Landymore should have been court-martialled.

"In the context of the single service concept, no," Mr. Hellyer replied.

Mr. Forrestall later asked why the admiral was not court-martialled if he had been disloyal for 18 months.

Mr. Hellyer said that if the issue had been anything less serious than the issue of the single service he would have insisted on a courtmartial. He did not elaborate.

Admiral Landymore still is in the navy and will be until April.

Mr. Forrestall said Mr. Hellyer had made a serious allega-

Holdout Denied On Hydro

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp told the Commons Thursday the federal government is not holding back any financial aid for hydro projects in British Columbia.

He was replying to H. W. Herridge (NDP, Kootenay West) who quoted Premier Bennett as saying Ottawa was withholding "no-strings-attached financial aid" from hydro projects in efforts to obtain part ownership of B.C. water and power resources.

Mr. Sharp said the Bennett statement "is both absurd and without foundation."

HOUSE HEARS FIRINGS ROW

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

A crisis over the mass firing of psychologists at Riverview Mental Hospital took preference over departmental estimates in the legislature Thursday.

Patrick McGeer (L, Vancouver Point Grey) asked for an adjournment of regular business so the House could consider a matter of "urgent public importance" — the firing of the five-member staff of psychologists at Riverview, who had submitted 30-day resignation notices because of what they called intolerable working conditions.

A tense atmosphere settled over the House in the ensuing discussions, until Health Minister Black finally announced he would try to meet the psychologists to discuss the problem.

QUICK MEETING

Mr. Black, prompted by Premier Bennett, said, "I will contact my deputy in an effort to have these people in my office as quickly as it can be arranged. At the moment, that is the only commitment I can make."

(He later said the meeting has been tentatively set for "early next week, Monday, if it can be done.")

'WITHIN CHANNELS'

Attorney-General Bonner had tried to block a discussion on the floor of the House, saying it was a "matter which is entirely within channels and ought not interrupt business of the House."

But Speaker William Murray ruled that under standing orders of the House, only nine members have to stand in their places to bring about a discussion of urgent affairs, and all the NDP and Liberal members supported this step.

CAN'T BE FOUND

Dr. McGeer pointed out that qualified psychologists cannot be found in B.C. on short notice and that the "actual resignation of the psychologists is coupled with the threatened resignations of psychiatrists at Riverview Hospital.

"Willing as they are and anxious as they are to serve the public need, if we allow these resignations to go through we

Charts Case Trial Ordered

Featherstone

OTTAWA (CP) — Bower Edward Featherstone, 27, was committed Thursday for trial by judge and jury on two charges under the Official Secrets Act.

Magistrate Glenn E. Strike ruled at Featherstone's preliminary hearing that he is satisfied there is sufficient evidence to require the former printing craftsman to stand trial.

Featherstone is charged with obtaining and retaining classified marine charts which could be useful to an enemy while employed in the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

Formal committal for trial will be made March 29. Featherstone remains free on $12,500 property bail.

Senator Steps Down

Every team in the Canadian Football League turned its back on Commissioner Keith Davey Thursday, and the senator took his only out by immediately resigning. Disillusioned ex-commissioner—a veteran of seven weeks in the post—sang the mood of the day with a "dead march' down the long flight of stairs from the fateful meeting in Montreal.

LBJ Invites Pearson

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson has invited Prime Minister Pearson to visit him March 8 for what will be a social and personal call, the White House announced Thursday.

The two met last Aug. 21 to dedicate a pavilion in Franklin D. Roosevelt Park on New Brunswick's Campobello Island.

There will be no agenda, Tom Johnson, assistant press secretary, told reporters, but "no doubt they will discuss a number of subjects of mutual interest."

We Learn Today How We'll Pay

By RON COLLISTER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The blueprint for taxation in Canada for the next couple of decades will be disclosed today by the Carter commission on taxation.

The commission has been at work for four years, at a cost of more than $3,000,000.

It has been the costliest Royal Commission in Canadian history, except for the bi-and-bi commission.

The six-volume report, costing $40 a set, will be released tonight, after the money markets have closed for the weekend.

It is expected to contain stiff medicine for Canadians, but not necessarily medicine that the government will ask them to swallow.

For example, the commission is understood to urge a capital gains tax.

AGAINST POLICY

But, at this time in Canada's history, when the government is encouraging Canadians to take the risk and invest in Canada's growth, that would defeat national policy.

The Tories' financial critic, Waldo Monteith, said Thursday night:

"I am frightened that it might, at least in the early stages until people get used to it, deter investment in our own growth in Canada.

"A person is entitled to a certain amount of risk profit, but

Another Court Action?

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Island Editor

CAMPBELL RIVER — Officials of the municipality and water board visited Buttle Lake Thursday, and what they saw may bring another court action involving Western Mines.

The party claims it saw Western Mines acting contrary to the Pollution Control Act.

* * *

At a meeting following the trip, Campbell River Water Board instructed its lawyer to proceed through the courts to stop escapement of pollution and dumping of tailings in Buttle Lake.

It was the water board that last month got a B.C. Appeal Court ruling reversing a Pollution Control Board decision to allow dumping of tailings.

* * *

The visitors included chamber of commerce and anti-pollution society officials, in addition to members of municipal council and the water board.

"Members saw escapement of tailings into the waters of Myra Creek and construction of a pipeline in apparent anticipation of receiving permits to dump tailings into the waters of Buttle Lake," the board said.

* * *

The water board said it has had no word from either Western Mines or the attorney-general's department, whether they have abandoned their right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Until the appeal period expires about March 16, or until this right has been waived "it would be extremely unusual for the Pollution Conrol Board to take jurisdiction over the procedure."

'Very Disturbed'

Diefenbaker Senses Election This Fall

SASKATOON (CP) — Opposition leader Diefenbaker said Thursday there could be a national election this fall.

He suggested at a news conference the effects of centennial celebrations could "rub off on some people" and result in a fall election.

'VERY DISTURBED'

"I am very disturbed at the degree in which the Pearson government is transforming national centennial celebrations to the confines of Liberalism."

He accused Prime Minister Pearson's government of using the centennial programming to political advantage.

Earlier in Winnipeg Premier Roblin drove to the airport to see Mr. Diefenbaker, who was passing through on his way to Prince Albert from Ottawa.

Reporters there said that during the brief meeting the two were overheard discussing the Conservative leadership convention to be held in Toronto in September.

NEW NAME

One said Mr. Diefenbaker told the premier he understood Senator Wallace McCutcheon would be announcing his candidacy for the leadership.

The Conservative leader maintained his silence as to whether he will be a candidate.

Prize Offered for Good One

Cafe Apple Pie Dowdy

You can't buy a good piece of pie in any restaurant in British Columbia, the legislature was told Thursday.

* * *

Herb Capozzi (SC, Vancouver Centre) said, "There is probably no area in the world with a lower standard of food than the cafes and restaurants of British Columbia."

Outside the House, he later announced he would offer a $100 prize and a plaque "for the best restaurant-produced apple pie using B.C. apples."

B.C.'s three women cabinet ministers without protfolio, Mrs. Grace McCarthy, Mrs. Isabel Dawson and Mrs. Patricia Jordan, have agreed to serve as judges, and the contest will probably be held through the B.C. Junior Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Capozzi said.

* * *

When the Socred backbencher complained about apple pies, during debate on agricultural department estimates, Premier Bennett interjected, "The finest value any family can get in any city in B.C. is Okanagan apple pie — and along with it they should be eating cheese from Armstrong."

* * *

Vanishing Earl Puzzles Papers, Including Own

LONDON (CP) — The prolonged absence of Princess Margaret's husband, the Earl of Snowdon, on a trip to the East is beginning to cause comment in the British press.

* * *

Snowdon, who does photography for Lord Thomson's Sunday Times color supplement, went abroad at the end of January "on business." One or two day later, Princess Margaret went into hospital for a checkup.

The Evening News reports conflicting replies from Kensington Palace and The Sunday Times offices to questions about his movements.

His secretary at the palace said he was in Japan on a photographic assignment for The Sunday Times. His office in Thomson House said: "We don't know where he is."

* * *

The announcement about an assignment had not come from the newspaper, The Sunday Times spokesman said.

Snowdon's palace secretary, who handles most of his Sunday Times correspondence, said the earl is travelling with a member of The Sunday Times reporting staff and will be back in London "sometime next month."

Princess Margaret, who has many friends in show business, dined at the Savoy Hotel Wednesday with a party including actor Peter Sellers and his wife, and attended the opening of a new ballet at Covent Garden, starring Dame Margot Fonteyn and Rudolf Nureyev, Thursday.

Elk-Beaver Shore Sold to Regional Board

By A. H. MURPHY

The recreational and park use of more than 700 acres of unspoiled land in the Elk-Beaver Lakes complex was safeguarded "for all time" Thursday when Victoria turned the area over to the regional district of the capital of British Columbia.

At the same time, a long-standing source of friction between Saanich and Victoria was removed.

Negotiations leading up to the transfer have been in progress but under wraps for weeks.

UNANIMOUS APPROVAL

This came to an end at Thursday's meeting of city council. Hugh Curtis and Mayor Stephen expressed gratification.

Saanich council, Victoria council and the regional board all gave unanimous approval.

The arrangement provides:

- Ownership of the Elk-Beaver Lakes watershed will be vested in the regional district.
- The regional board will pay the city the sum of $250,000 (net) over a period of 10 years.
- Saanich will take over completely the maintenance of the area, because the regional board is authorized to acquire parkland but not to maintain it.
- The area will be dedicated in perpetuity as parkland.
- The 30-acre game farm on the east side of the Patricia Bay Highway is not included.
- Money accruing from sale of land to the Greater Victoria Water Board for use as a right-of-way will revert to the city.

SPLENDID EXAMPLE

After a city council meeting Thursday, Mayor Stephen said he considered the decision one of the most splendid examples of municipal leadership given in this district in 20 years.

Wednesday, at an in-camera meeting of the regional board, while explaining the plan to commissioners, the mayor said Victoria aldermen were "sticking their necks out" to some extent in disposing of the property for $250,000 when it could bring in millions if developed for commercial use.

PROBLEM ERASED

However, general acceptance of the plan at the local government level was indicated by complete unanimity both in Victoria and Saanich.

"A feature of the agreement which is deeply satisfying to Victoria is that it removes for all time a problem which has been a source of irritation to Saanich," the mayor added Thursday. He also observed that while Victorians did not lose the use of the park, they were relieved of the $10,000-a-year maintenance cost in addition to the $250,000 they receive.

Ald. Robert Baird, parks committee chairman, was singled out for special praise by the mayor, as was Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

Reeve Curtis of Saanich, who is also chairman of the regional board, said the transfer was "one of the finest gestures ever made in the history of local government."

SOURCE OF ANXIETY

Final disposition of the land had been a source of anxiety to Saanich for years, the reeve said, and it was always feared that it might be put to commercial use. The decision of Victoria removed that fear, and, in addition, gave the regional district a keystone for its parks system.

"My optimism is at a peak, for if it is possible to resolve a complicated and often frustrating question such as this, there is little in the field of intermunicipal relations which cannot be settled in a similarly friendly and forthright manner," the reeve said.

The matter of Victoria-owned parkland within the borders of Saanich has been a contentious question for a decade or more.

As far back as 1955, Saanich attempted to force the issue by selling a portion of the park at a land tax sale. Saanich claimed that the city owed $700 on the land and had lost all right to it by refusal to pay.

The city fought the case to the Supreme Court of British Columbia and won.

Much jockeying back and forth has taken place since that time. There has been at least one proposal to subdivide part of the property and sell it commercially.

VALUES RANGED

Mayor Stephen maintained this year that such a plan now would be a sure way for an alderman to get himself hanged to the nearest lamp post, but the possibility always existed that a future council might succumb to temptation.

Values placed on the land have fluctuated, but it is generally conceded now, in municipal circles, that it is worth well upward of $2,000,000.

CEREMONY LIKELY

However, as Ald. Hugh Ramsay pointed out Thursday, this value is based on the premise that it might be developed commercially, and that intention is just not present.

As parkland, the alderman pointed out, it was worth just what the city asked and the region was willing to pay, and price was not by any means the first consideration.

A proposal to hold a transfer ceremony right on the parkland property, at which time Mayor Stephen would turn over the deed to Reeve Curtis, as regional board chairman, will probably be introduced in municipal circles in the near future.

New Group Helps Indians, Dual Attitude Under Fire

By MARIE CADORETTE

COBBLE HILL—A new organization to fight for the underprivileged, particularly Indians, has been formed here. It will demand social justice for those who need it.

The group, as yet unnamed, includes women representing PTAs, church groups and service organizations.

The group was formed following an eloquent speech by Louise Underwood, secretary of the Cowichan Band.

* * *

Miss Underwood said a dual welfare attitude exists, and the women decided it should be investigated.

Guest speakers at the first meeting were Ray Ferris, department of social welfare, Mrs. Lewis Langlois, public health nurse, and George Manuel, community development worker for the Cowichan Indian Band.

* * *

Mr. Manuel said Indians did not choose to live on reserves, and this was alien to their type of life.

He said many laws robbed the Indian of his initiative and pride. This led to the general deterioration of Indian peoples across Canada.

* * *

But Mr. Manuel said it was not the original intention of the Indian Act which was provided to protect the Indian.

He said now the Indians need acceptance by the middle and high-class white society.

* * *

Mr. Manuel said in the past Indian people were forced to associate with the lowest of the white society, consequently adopting their living habits.

Band Checks Sawmill Business

DUNCAN — Cowichan Indian Band is planning to start a mobile sawmill operation, providing employment for about six men.

Abel Joe has been appointed to see if there is enough raw material, whether there is a market, and whether band members can be trained without too much difficulty.

In other band business:

The laying of pipe into the Klem Klem Alutz area is expected to start soon.

* * *

Louise

The cost for the three-mile line will be $16,625.

The line will serve 27 homes on the reserve.

One of the customers will be St. Catherine's Indian School on Tzouhalem Road.

The water will be bought in bulk from the City of Duncan.

CITY WATER

The new line will be connected to the city water system at the corner of Maple Bay and Tzouhalem Roads.

The band granted permission to the Cowichan Waterbouys Skin Diving Club to have their swimmers land at the Silver Bridge on Easter weekend.

RESOLUTION

Secretary Louise Underwood said "Council is also investigating a resolution submitted to the Union of B.C. Municipalities regarding a petition to the provincial government, to initiate action with the federal government, to obtain the contract of B.C. Indian Affairs on the basis of education, welfare, health, employment and training."

She said "The band feels the resolution is a bit premature but we'll look into the matter further."

The band also:

- Was advised by the agricultural minister the Cowichan Indian Reserve will be included in the Canada Land Inventory Program, but field work would not be completed until 1970 and survey results would not be available until some time after.
- Asked the education committee to elect two Cowichan Band representatives for the Queen of Angels School Board.
- Approved the estimated amount of $14,140 for the 1967-68 band revenue budget.
- Submitted a request to the minister to approve a grant to the band council regarding part payment for a full time band manager, secretary-treasurer and clerical assistant.

Another Road Needed On Busy Waterfront

By MARY TAYLOR

A road is needed to funnel off some of the heavy traffic on the main Third Avenue and Argyle Street area.

VERY LIVELY

"The fire hydrant will provide good protection for the fishing fleet and will also provide for the Somass lumber assembly area," Chairman Dennis O'Brien explained.

A new sewer outlet on the old Tahsis property was also requested from council and met with a good reception.

Trustees Read The Fine Print

The school board recently purchased six acres of land located between Drinkwater and Sherman Roads, but 2.2 acres was required by North Cowichan municipality for a future road.

National Pride Helps Carnival

NORTH COWICHAN — "We should not be too cheap and we should show that we are proud of our country," Coun. Dennis Hogan told the North Cowichan Recreation and Centennial Commission, regarding the forthcoming Cowichan Timber Carnival.

The event will be held in August.

BASH AHEAD

He said this area should have a big celebration to commemorate Canada's 100th birthday and assistance should be given to the organizing groups.

This year's Cowichan Timber Carnival will once more be coordinated by Duncan Jaycees.

CASH PROBLEM

The reeve said considering the two grants from the civic governments, no profit was made at all.

Recreation Commissioner Stan Baker expressed "serious reservations" because "a celebration of that nature should not go into the hole."

He said the recreation and centennial commissions should take a more active part in centennial events.

Commissioner Jack Efford said "I am in favor of the Timber Carnival but the organizing committee should keep in closer touch with the commission.

FEW REPORTS

No strings should be attached to the organizers "but they should report to us once in a while."

Commissioner Norman Bevan said the Timber Carnival should be supported.

CHEMAINUS SHOW

The reeve announced the show The Best of Barkerville will be presented at Chemainus April 18.

NANAIMO — The public mischief trial in assize court may be completed Friday.

Geoffrey Collins, Qualicum Beach, and Collins TV and Furniture Limited, were charged after a report of a burglary Nov. 1, 1966.

* * *

Mr. Holbech testified that he had been in the store several times the night before to get personal items.

Island Dairies Need a Hand

The government should be spending more money on agricultural production and marketing research because the farm income increase in B.C. is the lowest in all of Canada, Opposition Leader Robert Strachan told the legislature Thursday night.

He said a recent department of agriculture report shows the cost of producing milk averages $4.87 for Island dairy farmers compared with $3.80 for those in the Fraser Valley.

"It's very difficult for Vancouver Island dairymen to maintain their farms under the present conditions," he told the House, adding that he knows of two young farmers near his own home up-Island who have decided to go out of business.

'Force Province To Pay More'

COURTENAY—Ald. Geoff Browning says the provincial government should accept a much greater share of the school budget.

He criticized the sharing arrangement now in effect. Ald. Browning was discussing the present $2,900,000 school budget here.

He suggested city council fail to approve a formal motion of acceptance of the budget, as a protest.

Saanich Needs $500,000

Saanich has given preliminary approval to more than $500,000 worth of drainage, road and sidewalk projects during 1967.

Public works committee this week scrutinized a list of projects prepared by Neville Life, municipal engineer, and sent it on to council with a recommendation for approval.

The program will include $169,704 worth of improvements to the municipality's storm drainage systems, $332,971 worth of work on roads and $50,000 on sidewalks.

All of the sums are approximations until municipal council considers and adopts the 1967 budget, possibly in April. Some of the money which will be spent this year has been brought forward from 1966.

Paving and Cars

In photo taken last week from same point on Esquimalt Road, entrance to Yarrows is seen between two buildings, farthest one new steel storage shed, recently completed. Streetcar tracks are gone but wooden sidewalk at right looks like one in previous photo. St. Paul's Naval and Garrison Church, right background, was moved from site just outside dockyard gate in 1904, therefore is not seen in first photo. — (William Boucher)

Tram and Tars

Island to Be First For Breathalyser

Vancouver Island motorists will have the dubious honor of being the first to take the instant roadside breathalyser tests for blood alcohol content.

Attorney-General Bonner said Wednesday the testing balloons will be pressed into service after April 1 in Victoria and Nanaimo.

"In other words, the tests will be available throughout most of Vancouver Island," he said.

GOOD APPROACH

"We are commencing in this area because we are anxious to get a good approach to the problem and gain experience in application before branching out to other parts of the province."

The balloon breathalysers will probably be applied to other parts of the province during the rest of the year, he added.

SENSITIVE CRYSTALS

Plans to use the balloons were held back for a while when it was discovered reading of the sensitive crystals contained in the balloons were subject to inconsistent interpretation.

"We were anxious to remove any question in that area," said Mr. Bonner. "It had to read yes or no. Last week we received a favorable report."

The constable will have to decide whether the motorist is in an impaired state and should be arrested under the Criminal Code, or is in a condition to endanger the safety of others.

If it is a case of road safety, the motorist will be asked to surrender his licence and taxi home, or take a balloon test to prove his blood alcohol content is less than .08 per cent.

Senior Citizens Meet Monday

The annual meeting of the Victoria Senior Citizens' Housing Society will be held at 8 p.m. Monday in the Senior Citizens' Activity Centre in Centennial Square.

Computer Aids Stricken Ship

The 220-foot Island Tug and Barge ocean tug Sudbury II was expected to reach a stricken freighter 300 miles out in the Pacific about 2 a.m. today, a company spokesman said Wednesday night.

The Victoria-based tug is expected to take the 10,000-ton British freighter Millstrader in tow at first light.

* * *

The freighter is of the old Park class, and still uses steam. It is understood from radio reports reaching Victoria from the vessel that one boiler has broken down and she is not in any immediate danger.

* * *

The Vancouver search and rescue centre, which was linked last April to the U.S. Coast Guard AMVERS-SURPIC computer in New York, dispatched a maritime patrol aircraft to the scene. The plane later reported that the U.S., tanker Atlantic Trader had gone to the ship's aid, but had left with the approval of the freighter's captain.

* * *

The AMVERS-SURPIC computer in New York took only minutes to advise that the U.S. tanker and a Japanese ship, Chozan Maru, were in the vicinity of the stricken vessel.

The Sudbury II, which was delivered from an Australian shipyard in 1957, has a crew of 16 and is expected to be able to tow the Millstrader at about six knots.

* * *

It is not yet known from the ship's agents if the vessel will be taken to Portland, Ore., or into Canadian waters for repairs. "It should be back by Friday afternoon," said the company spokesman.

Costumes Were Ball

PARKSVILLE — The big centennial ball was not a packed house, but a good time was achieved by those who did show up.

Local residents and visitors joined in the centennial spirit and turned out in everything from old-time bathing costumes, ancient nightshirts and caps, beautiful gowns of 1867, many frock coats and top hats.

The community hall was an excellent background for the event with a giant birthday cake gleaming with 100 electric candles as the focal point on the stage and pictures all around the walls of events of bygone days in this district, old buildings long since gone and pioneer residents.

★ ★ ★

Arthur Butler was master of ceremonies and music was provided by Ken Lindgren and his Centennial Sounds.

The author of the book given as a prize was on hand to autograph and present the prizes. This was Herbert L. McDonald of West Vancouver, writer of British Columbia; Challenge in Abundance.

Fossils Found Often

Two boys know Island was once covered by water, because of proof found on fossil hunting expeditions near Maple Bay. David Luther, 13, left, and Leif Hagar, 12, have collections including imprints of plants which grew long before human life in any part of Canada.—(Klaus Moenier)

DUNCAN — Tenders have been called for the controversial North Cowichan Municipal Hall. Deadline is March 15. Value of hall and land near the municipal workshop four miles north of Duncan is estimated at $275,000. Residents of the southern portion of the municipality have protested the site, because it is so far north. Chemainus and Crofton are happy about the choice.

★ ★ ★

COURTENAY — There are four hold-outs against a Monday closing agreement here. Monday closing on the main street of Courtenay will go into effect next week. All but four stores have indicated willingness to cooperate.

★ ★ ★

TOFINO — William Stout, former lighthouse keeper at Lennard Light, has died in Kirkwall, Orkney, Scotland. He and his wife bought an island in Tofino Inlet for their retirement. The estate was sold when Mr. Stout became sick and decided to take a trip to Scotland.

★ ★ ★

★ ★ ★

CHEMAINUS — Travelling in the passing lane of a three-lane highway is forbidden. RCMP are concerned about this safety hazard. Several motorists were given warnings, now charges are being laid. An RCMP officer said this practice is common on the Malahat, and may have caused a recent crash that killed several young people recently.

'Fight, But No Win'

DUNCAN — A man who believes a court case is a game he cannot win, will have to go through with a trial anyway.

Donald Joseph Fee pleaded innocent to careless driving. But when Magistrate George Hallett set a trial date, Fee objected.

"It is just a big farce," he said, and told the Magistrate he was refusing to go to trial.

"I am guilty before I come in here," he said. But the magistrate refused to allow him to change his plea.

BRANNAN LAKE

A Lake Cowichan juvenile, 14, was sentenced to an indefinite period at Brannan Lake School. He was charged with the arson at a Lake Cowichan Elementary School last May.

A boy who fell into a pool of water running from police Saturday night was fined $25 for being a minor in possession.

BEER DRUNK

James Allen MacDonald and companions John Loos, Ladysmith and Allen Lowe, Chemainus, were checked at Silver Park Drive-in.

They were drinking beer.

Both Loos and Lowe were fined $25 by Magistrate George Hallett.

Darryl Cave was charged after RCMP discovered his car smashed into a telephone pole on Lake Cowichan Road, November 17.

NAVY KEEPS RANKS

Admiral Long Disloyal

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday night that Rear-Admiral William Landymore was fired for "18 months of consistent disloyalty to the policies of the people he was paid to serve."

The minister conceded under persistent questioning by Michael Forrestall (PC—Halifax) that he did not once talk to the admiral during those 18 months.

Mr. Hellyer said that from November, 1964, Admiral Landymore, then chief of Maritime Command, fully understood the government's policy on unification and was unalterably opposed to it.

QUALIFIED NO

He said the admiral returned to Halifax from the Ottawa conference in that month and did "everything he possibly could" to prepare for a confrontation on the issue.

Mr. Forrestall asked whether the minister thought Admiral Landymore should have been court-martialled.

"In the context of the single service concept, no," Mr. Hellyer replied.

Mr. Forrestall later asked why the admiral was not court-martialled if he had been disloyal for 18 months.

DIDN'T ELABORATE

Mr. Hellyer said that if the issue had been anything less serious than the issue of the single service he would have insisted on a courtmartial. He did not elaborate.

Admiral Landymore still is in the navy and will be until April.

Mr. Forrestall said Mr. Hellyer had made a serious allega-

OTTAWA (CP) — Defence Minister Hellyer said Thursday that the navy will be able to keep its rank titles until allied countries also unify their armed forces.

He also told the Commons defence committee that even after the common uniform is issued in four or five years, servicemen may continue to wear their traditional walking-out uniforms on appropriate occasions.

* * *

He did not define "appropriate occasions."

Mr. Hellyer made clear in a 54-page brief read to the committee that a new rank structure for the unified services will be introduced. The structure will be largely the army's.

He added, "It is my intention to authorize members of the Canadian armed forces to use rank titles traditional to their former service. That is the general policy."

* * *

Later, in reply to Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East), the minister said the regulations will permit sailors to continue to use their present rank titles, such as petty officer. Promotion would not require them to change to army nomenclature.

If unification were successful and "some years from now when other countries follow suit," a consensus would arise for the full adoption of the titles of the unified force.

The five-man defence staff was present — in navy, army and air force uniforms — for the committee session.

Mr. Hellyer told Gordon Churchill, former Conservative defence minister, that their attendance was possible because his department is running so smoothly.

Mr. Hellyer said unification will not require any change in the organization of combat units "and, therefore, combat

House Hears Firings Row

By JACK FRY
Legislative Reporter

A crisis over the mass firing of psychologists at Riverview Mental Hospital took preference over departmental estimates in the legislature Thursday.

Patrick McGeer (L, Vancouver Point Grey) asked for an adjournment of regular business so the House could consider a matter of "urgent public importance" — the firing of the five-member staff of psychologists at Riverview, who had submitted 30-day resignation notices because of what they called intolerable working conditions.

A tense atmosphere settled over the House in the ensuing discussions, until Health Minister Black finally announced he would try to meet the psychologists to discuss the problem.

QUICK MEETING

Mr. Black, prompted by Premier Bennett, said, "I will contact my deputy in an effort to have these people in my office as quickly as it can be arranged. At the moment, that is the only commitment I can make."

(He later said the meeting has been tentatively set for "early next week, Monday, if it can be done.")

'WITHIN CHANNELS'

Attorney-General Bonner had tried to block a discussion on the floor of the House, saying it was a "matter which is entirely within channels and ought not interrupt business of the House."

But Speaker William Murray ruled that under standing orders of the House, only nine members have to stand in their places to bring about a discussion of urgent affairs, and all the NDP and Liberal members supported this step.

CAN'T BE FOUND

Dr. McGeer pointed out that qualified psychologists cannot be found in B.C. on short notice and that the "actual resignation of the psychologists is coupled with the threatened resignations of psychiatrists at Riverview Hospital.

"Willing as they are and anxious as they are to serve the public need, if we allow these resignations to go through we

'Very Disturbed'

Diefenbaker Senses Election This Fall

SASKATOON (CP) — Opposition leader Diefenbaker said Thursday there could be a national election this fall.

He suggested at a news conference the effects of centennial celebrations could "rub off on some people" and result in a fall election.

'VERY DISTURBED'

"I am very disturbed at the degree in which the Pearson government is transforming national centennial celebrations to the confines of Liberalism."

He accused Prime Minister Pearson's government of using the centennial programming to political advantage.

Earlier in Winnipeg Premier Roblin drove to the airport to see Mr. Diefenbaker, who was passing through on his way to Prince Albert from Ottawa.

Reporters there said that during the brief meeting the two were overheard discussing the Conservative leadership convention to be held in Toronto in September.

NEW NAME

One said Mr. Diefenbaker told the premier he understood Senator Wallace McCutcheon would be announcing his candidacy for the leadership.

The Conservative leader maintained his silence as to whether he will be a candidate.

Holdout Denied On Hydro

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Sharp told the Commons Thursday the federal government is not holding back any financial aid for hydro projects in British Columbia.

He was replying to H. W. Herridge (NDP, Kootenay West) who quoted Premier Bennett as saying Ottawa was withholding "no-strings-attached financial aid" from hydro projects in efforts to obtain part ownership of B.C. water and power resources.

Mr. Sharp said the Bennett statement "is both absurd and without foundation."

LBJ Invites Pearson

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Johnson has invited Prime Minister Pearson to visit him March 6 for what will be a social and personal call, the White House announced Thursday.

The two met last Aug. 21 to dedicate a pavilion in Franklin D. Roosevelt Park on New Brunswick's Campobello Island.

There will be no agenda, Tom Johnson, assistant press secretary, told reporters, but "no doubt they will discuss a number of subjects of mutual interest."

Senator Steps Down

Every team in the Canadian Football League turned its back on Commissioner Keith Davey Thursday, and the senator took his only out by immediately resigning. Disillusioned ex-commissioner—a veteran of seven weeks in the post—sets the mood of the day with a "dead march' down the long flight of stairs from the fateful meeting in Montreal.

We Learn Today How We'll Pay

By RON COLLISTER
Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The blueprint for taxation in Canada for the next couple of decades will be disclosed today by the Carter commission on taxation.

The commission has been at work for four years, at a cost of more than $3,000,000.

It has been the costliest Royal Commission in Canadian history, except for the bi-and-bi commission.

The six-volume report, costing $40 a set, will be released tonight, after the money markets have closed for the weekend.

It is expected to contain stiff medicine for Canadians, but not necessarily medicine that the government will ask them to swallow.

For example, the commission is understood to urge a capital gains tax.

AGAINST POLICY

But, at this time in Canada's history, when the government is encouraging Canadians to take the risk and invest in Canada's growth, that would defeat national policy.

The Tories' financial critic, Waldo Monteith, said Thursday night:

"I am frightened that it might, at least in the early stages until people get used to it, deter investment in our own growth in Canada.

"A person is entitled to a certain amount of risk profit, but

Another Court Action?

Buttle Visitors Angry

By PATRICK O'NEILL
Island Editor

CAMPBELL RIVER — Officials of the municipality and water board visited Buttle Lake Thursday, and what they saw may bring another court action involving Western Mines.

The party claims it saw Western Mines acting contrary to the Pollution Control Act.

* * *

At a meeting following the trip, Campbell River Water Board instructed its lawyer to proceed through the courts to stop escapement of pollution and dumping of tailings in Buttle Lake.

It was the water board that last month got a B.C. Appeal Court ruling reversing a Pollution Control Board decision to allow dumping of tailings.

* * *

The visitors included chamber of commerce and anti-pollution society officials, in addition to members of municipal council and the water board.

"Members saw escapement of tailings into the waters of Myra Creek and construction of a pipeline in apparent anticipation of receiving permits to dump tailings into the waters of Buttle Lake," the board said.

* * *

The water board said it has had no word from either Western Mines or the attorney-general's department, whether they have abandoned their right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada.

Until the appeal period expires about March 15, or until this right has been waived "it would be extremely unusual for the Pollution Control Board to take jurisdiction over the procedure."

Charts Case Trial Ordered

Featherstone

OTTAWA (CP) — Bower Edward Featherstone, 37, was committed Thursday for trial by judge and jury on two charges under the Official Secrets Act.

Magistrate Glenn E. Strike ruled at Featherstone's preliminary hearing that he is satisfied there is sufficient evidence to require the former printing craftsman to stand trial.

Featherstone is charged with obtaining and retaining classified marine charts which could be useful to an enemy while employed in the federal department of energy, mines and resources.

Formal committal for trial will be made March 29. Featherstone remains free on $12,500 property bail.

Prize Offered for Good One

Cafe Apple Pie Dowdy

You can't buy a good piece of pie in any restaurant in British Columbia, the legislature was told Thursday.

* * *

Herb Capozzi (SC, Vancouver Centre) said, "There is probably no area in the world with a lower standard of food than the cafes and restaurants of British Columbia."

Outside the House, he later announced he would offer a $100 prize and a plaque "for the best restaurant-produced apple pie using B.C. apples."

B.C.'s three women cabinet ministers without portfolio, Mrs. Grace McCarthy, Mrs. Isabel Dawson and Mrs. Patricia Jordan, have agreed to serve as judges, and the contest will probably be held through the B.C. Junior Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Capozzi said.

* * *

When the Socred backbencher complained about agricultural department estimates, Premier Bennett interjected, "The finest value any family can get in any city in B.C. is Okanagan apple pie — and along with it they should be eating cheese from Armstrong."

* * *

Vanishing Earl Puzzles Papers, Including Own

LONDON (CP) — The prolonged absence of Princess Margaret's husband, the Earl of Snowdon, on a trip to the East is beginning to cause comment in the British press.

* * *

Snowdon, who does photography for Lord Thomson's Sunday Times color supplement, went abroad at the end of January "on business." One or two days later, Princess Margaret went into hospital for a checkup.

The Evening News reports conflicting replies from Kensington Palace and The Sunday Times offices to questions about his movements.

His secretary at the palace said he was in Japan on a photographic assignment for The Sunday Times. His office in Thomson House said: "We don't know where he is."

* * *

The announcement about an assignment had not come from the newspaper, The Sunday Times spokesman said.

Snowdon's palace secretary, who handles most of his Sunday Times correspondence, said the earl is travelling with a member of The Sunday Times reporting staff and will be back in London "sometime next month."

* * *

Lake Park Guaranteed By Elk-Beaver Sale

By A. H. MURPHY

The recreational and park use of more than 700 acres of unspoiled land in the Elk-Beaver Lakes complex was safeguarded "for all time" Thursday when Victoria turned the area over to the regional district of the capital of British Columbia.

At the same time, a long-standing source of friction between Saanich and Victoria was removed.

Negotiations leading up to the transfer have been in progress but under wraps for weeks.

This came to an end at Thursday's meeting of city council. Reeve Curtis and Mayor Stephen expressed gratification.

Saanich council, Victoria council and the regional board all gave unanimous approval.

The arrangement provides:

- Ownership of the Elk-Beaver Lakes watershed will be vested in the regional district.
- The regional board will pay the city the sum of $250,000 (net) over a period of 10 years.
- Saanich will take over completely the maintenance of the area, because the regional board is authorized to acquire parkland but not to maintain it.
- The area will be dedicated in perpetuity as parkland.
- The 30-acre game farm on the east side of the Patricia Bay Highway is not included.
- Money accruing from sale of land to the Greater Victoria Water Board for use as a right-of-way will revert to the city.

SPLENDID EXAMPLE

After a city council meeting Thursday, Mayor Stephen said he considered the decision one of the most splendid examples of municipal leadership given in this district in 20 years.

Wednesday, at an in-camera meeting of the regional board, while explaining the plan to commissioners, the mayor said Victoria aldermen were "sticking their necks out" to some extent in disposing of the property for $250,000 when it could bring in millions if developed for commercial use.

PROBLEM ERASED

However, general acceptance of the plan at the local government level was indicated by complete unanimity both in Victoria and Saanich.

"A feature of the agreement which is deeply satisfying to Victoria is that it removes for all time a problem which has been a source of irritation to Saanich," the mayor added Thursday. He also observed that while Victorians did not lose the use of the park, they were relieved of the $10,000-a-year maintenance cost in addition to the $250,000 they receive.

Ald. Robert Baird, parks committee chairman, was singled out for special praise by the mayor, as was Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow.

Reeve Curtis of Saanich, who is also chairman of the regional board, said the transfer was "one of the finest gestures ever made in the history of local government."

SOURCE OF ANXIETY

Final disposition of the land had been a source of anxiety to Saanich for years, the reeve said, and it was always feared that it might be put to commercial use. The decision of Victoria removed that fear, and, in addition, gave the regional district a keystone for its parks system.

"My optimism is at a peak, for if it is possible to resolve a complicated and often frustrating question such as this, there is little in the field of intermunicipal relations which cannot be settled in a similarly friendly and forthright manner," the reeve said.

The matter of Victoria-owned parkland within the borders of Saanich has been a contentious question for a decade or more.

As far back as 1955, Saanich attempted to force the issue by selling a portion of the park at a land tax sale. Saanich claimed that the city owed $700 on the land and had lost all right to it by refusal to pay.

The city fought the case to the Supreme Court of British Columbia and won.

Much jockeying back and forth has taken place since that time. There has been at least one proposal to subdivide part of the property and sell it commercially.

Mayor Stephen maintained this year that such a plan now would be a sure way for an alderman to get himself hanged to the nearest lamp post, but the possibility always existed that a future council might succumb to temptation.

Values placed on the land have fluctuated, but it is generally conceded now, in municipal circles, that it is worth well upward of $2,000,000.

CEREMONY LIKELY

However, as Ald. Hugh Ramsay pointed out Thursday, this value is based on the premise that it might be developed commercially, and that intention is just not present.

As parkland, the alderman pointed out, it was worth just what the city asked and the region was willing to pay, and price was not by any means the first consideration.

A proposal to hold a transfer ceremony right on the parkland property, at which time Mayor Stephen would turn over the deed to Reeve Curtis, as regional board chairman, will probably be introduced in municipal circles in the near future.

Domestic Plants on View?

Saanich is considering a five-acre park near the municipal hall where people could wander among the largest collection of domesticated plants in Western Canada.

It would be on the north side of the hall, in the direction of Swan Lake, Coun. Ed Lum told a meeting of the Vancouver Island Nurserymen's Association Thursday night.

* * *

He said it would be a display of labelled trees, with the species grouped in such a manner that people will get ideas for home planting.

The nurserymen are thinking of a Centennial project. They had discussed donating a collection of labelled shrubs to Gorge Park, also in Saanich, but Coun. Lum explained that the municipality plans to develop that as an open area.

* * *

They were also pondering an arboretum. There isn't an arboretum in Western Canada, and some nurserymen felt Saanich and the provincial government should be asked if they would support such a project.

The nurserymen will leave the proposals with a committee for a decision.

British Ship

Sudbury Towing Drifter

The Victoria tug Sudbury II began towing the stricken British freighter Millstrader, which had been drifting helplessly 300 miles out in the Pacific since Tuesday night, at 10:05 p.m. Thursday.

The 220-foot Island Tug and Barge vessel was to have made contact with the 7,000-ton Park class freighter, which has both boilers disabled, at 3 a.m. Thursday, but a pea-soup fog and rough seas caused the two vessels to lose touch.

The drifting vessel was consequently "lost" for several hours during Thursday.

PLANE SPOTTER

It did so about noon Thursday and flew over the drifting vessel until the Sudbury II, guided by the plane, reached the scene.

However, the tug did not get a line to the vessel until 8 p.m. Thursday.

LAG UNEXPLAINED

No reason is known for this period of "dead" time. Radio communications between the Sudbury II and the Vancouver Rescue Co-ordination Centre and Island Tug and Barge head office in Victoria were extremely poor Thursday night. A company spokesman said the last full report was received early Thursday.

The tug is believed to be towing the Millstrader at less than six knots, due to rough conditions. It will not be near land until early Saturday morning.

If any problems develop during the expected 30-hour tow, the vessels may pull into Victoria. If not, they will continue to Portland, Ore., the original destination of the freighter.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST.

February 24, 1867

Dispatch from a correspondent at Williams Creek:

I suppose you are in the midst of considerable excitement down below as to the capital. I have signed the petition for Victoria, but am afraid from the Governor's speech it will be of little avail. There are a good many in favor of New Westminster, but the majority seem to favor Victoria.

Miners are already preparing to leave Victoria for the mines. They are moving too early in the season for their own comfort.

Dr. Maggiel's pills were advertised on the front page:

"A very fountain of youth, for in every case they add new life and vitality, and restore the waning energies to their pristine state."

Lunch Van 'Fantastic Success'

Saanich's meals-on-wheels program, now only two weeks from being a year old, has proven a "fantastic success" in almost every way.

The observation was made Thursday by Mrs. Betty Marshall, the municipality's newly-appointed welfare administrator, when she reviewed the program.

On Thursday, 23 people who otherwise probably wouldn't have had a hot meal had prepared food brought to their door at lunch time.

"It is helping the people exactly the way we thought it would," said Mrs. Marshall. "We now deliver more than 20 meals each day."

The food is prepared by St. Joseph's Hospital and delivered by off-duty Saanich firemen in a Civil Defence feeding vehicle.

The recipient pays 50 cents for the food. The difference between the cost of the food and money collected from recipients is covered by the Douglas Rotary Club.

NOT ON WELFARE

People who receive the meals aren't welfare recipients. Mrs. Marshall said the welfare department's only interest in meals-on-wheels was organizing and co-ordinating the service.

She said elderly people now are being discharged from hospital earlier because there is an assurance they will be adequately nourished.

"Many people who have been visited by meals-on-wheels recover so quickly that the first thing we know is that they're well enough to do their own cooking," said Mrs. Marshall.

Air Polluters 'Should Pay'

People who make profits while polluting the air should pay for the privilege, a spokesman for the Esquimalt-View Royal Anti-Smoke Committee said Thursday.

Harry Gregson suggested that the cost of operating a provincial pollution control branch should be financed by a tax on the polluters.

Smithy Chases Horses

By DONALD GAIN

Business under the old spreading chestnut tree is pretty quiet these days, so a village blacksmith has to go looking for it.

"The days of horses coming to you are gone," says Fred Ball of 6863 Veyaness in Saanichton. "There's too much traffic."

"Actually I'm a farrier," he says, "a shoer of horses. I don't do other blacksmith work."

He covers the area from the Malahat south and out as far as Sooke.

"I go to Salt Spring Island for a day every now and then," he says. "I'll work on about 20 horses in a day."

His average is from four to 10 horses a day. His shop is in his panel truck, but usually does not include a forge. "Sometimes I carry it, but it's pretty dirty," he says.

Because he knows his customers' horses, he makes up the shoes on his forge at home and then fits them on when he calls.

"Half a dozen sizes will fit about 99 per cent of the horses," he says.

Mr. Ball learned his trade at the California State Polytechnic College in San Luis Obispo about 12 years ago. He has been working at it ever since.

"I got into it at the time because there were only two elderly fellows in the area shoeing horses and I felt there was a need for someone new."

Mr. Ball has a horse-hauling business in addition to his shoeing business.

"Between the two I keep busy," he says. "I don't even have time to cut my lawn."

He lives on four acres at Saanichton with his wife, Sheila, and two little girls, Lisa, 4, and Melissa, four months.

"It's an active, healthy life," he says. "I'm always on the go and I see quite a bit of the country, especially when I'm hauling horses."

Agriculture Minister:

No Speedy End To Nematode

The golden nematode took 17 years to develop in the Saanich Peninsula and it will take more than a year or so get rid of the worm, Agriculture Minister Richter told the legislature Thursday.

In reply to a question by John Tisdalle (SC, Saanich and the Islands) he said his department was working with the federal government and restrictions on the movement of nursery stock would be lifted as soon as possible.

Mr. Tisdalle said there was a need for nursery people to get out from under the restrictions as soon as possible, and asked the minister to take up their cause.

Southern Vancouver Island nurserymen since last fall have been protesting a federally-imposed quarantine on the export of soil-bearing stock from this area.

They have asked the federal government to lift the ban on all growers except those on whose land nematodes have been found.

Canvassers Needed

Canvassing will start March 1 of all Greater Victoria areas.

Court Could Snarl Dogcatcher's Duties

When a resident appears in Central Magistrate's Court and pleads not guilty to a dog-at-large charge, both Saanich poundmen are required to testify at the trial.

The trial can last anywhere from a few minutes to hours, and with both the municipality's animal controllers tied up dogs can have a field day.

Under the present system, if everyone charged with allowing a dog to be at large pleaded not guilty, the system would collapse.

Saanich Police Chief W. A. Pearson said Thursday the tying up of the poundmen presents a hardship to police officers who have enough to do without chasing dogs.

"We have one pound truck and two men to cover the 38 square miles of Saanich. There have been suggestions that we get another truck and have one man in each, but this also presents a problem.

"A poundman would be giving uncorroborated evidence in court if he was working alone in a truck, where now both men can testify."

The chief said another problem is that the hour of the trial is not set. Only the date is known, and whether it will be held in the morning or afternoon.

"Our men have to appear on the given date, and may have to wait hours before being called to give evidence."

Chief Pearson said he would like to see the police department and the pound authorities as two separate entities. At present he is responsible for both.

He suggested the animal controllers come under the municipality's chief inspector of services department and not the police.

"There are instances where policemen are necessary to deal with dogs, such as biting of children, but not licensing and impounding."

Goodies Face Extinction

Fernie Farm — home of hot scones, Devonshire cream and homemade strawberry jam on summer afternoons—faces closure under Milk Board regulations, Herbert Bruch (SC, Esquimalt) said Thursday.

Miss Mary Fernie and her sister, Daphne, operate the farm on William Head Road, and also sell unpasteurized milk to customers who come to the farm.

The cows and milk are all tested, Mr. Bruch said, but under Milk Marketing Board regulations the farm has been threatened with closure unless the milk is pasteurized or sold to a dairy.

Mr. Bruch told the legislature the regulations could close the farm simply because it was unable to expand.

"As long as the herd is tested, and milk meets qualifications, and people want to go to the farm and get the milk, regulations should be more flexible," he told the House.

Project Wins Approval

The joint centennial project of Colwood, Metchosin, Langford, Happy Valley and Glen Lake—a $240,000 heated swimming pool—has been approved by the federal and provincial governments.

Acceptance was announced Thursday.

The announcement said the provincial-federal share of the project will be $15,448—the remaining $224,552 will come from the communities concerned.

Honorary Chest Chief
